Covers all the world's scripts — from hieroglyphics to shorthand

the world's writing systems

Edited by PETER T. DANIELS and WILLIAM BRIGHT,

University of California, Los Angeles (Emeritus); University of Colorado

Ranging from cuneiform to shorthand, from archaic Greek to modern Chinese, from Old Persian to modern Cherokee, this is the only available work in English to cover all of the world's writing systems from ancient times to the present. Describing scores of scripts in use now or in the past around the world, this unusually comprehensive reference offers a detailed exploration of the history and typology of writing systems. More than eighty articles by scholars from over a dozen countries explain and document how a vast array of writing systems work—how alphabets, ideograms, pictographs, and hieroglyphics convey meaning in graphic form.

The work is organized in thirteen parts, each dealing with a particular group of writing systems defined historically, geographically, or conceptually. An introductory article provides the social and cultural context in which each group of writing systems was developed. Articles on individual scripts detail the historical origin of the writing system, its structure, and its relationship to the phonology of the corresponding spoken language. Each writing system is illustrated by a passage of text, accompanied by a romanized version, a phonetic transcription, and a modern English translation.

Matched by no other work in English, The World's Writing Systems is the only comprehensive resource covering every major writing system. This is a reference that no linguist or philologist will want to be without.

Gesture and the Nature of Language

David F. Armstrong, William C. Stokoe, and Sherman E. Wilcox

This book proposes a radical alternative to dominant views of the evolution of language, in particular the origins of syntax. The authors draw on evidence from areas such as primatology, anthropology, and linguistics to present a groundbreaking account of the notion that language emerged through visible bodily action.

Dimensions of Register Variation

A Cross-Linguistic Comparison

Douglas Biber

Douglas Biber's new book extends and refines the research and methodology reported in his groundbreaking, Variation Across Speech and Writing (1988), and adds for the first time a diachronic dimension. In it he gives a linguistic analysis of register in four widely differing languages: English, Nukulaelae Tuvaluan, Korean, and Somali. Striking similarities as well as differences emerge, allowing Biber to predict for the first time cross-linguistic universals of register variation.

Cognitive Space and Linguistic Case

Semantic and Syntactic Categories in English

Izchak M. Schlesinger

Drawing on evidence from psycholinguistic research and English language data, the author challenges the understanding of cases as categories in cognitive space, arguing that they are instead composed of more primitive cognitive notions: features and dimensions.

Directory of Programs in Linguistics in the United States & Canada

1995 Edition

An invaluable source of information
A must for every library

This ninth edition of the Directory describes programs in 180 institutions. Entries include the number and kind of degrees granted 1992-93 and 1993-94, faculty and their specialties, special institution resources, uncommonly taught languages offered during the last two years, the number of students enrolled in linguistics and the academic year system. The Directory also provides information on 18 organizations engaged in linguistic research and on 38 linguistic societies and related organizations around the world. Indexes of staff and uncommonly taught languages complement this collection.

The book is 8 1/2" x 11", spiral bound, 200 pages.

Mouton de Gruyter

On the occasion of the 1991 meeting of the Societas Linguistica Europaea in Kiel, celebrating the society's founding 25 years before, past presidents gave lectures on topics of their own choosing, partly revised versions of which are included in the present volume. The variety of topics discussed and the preferences clearly expressed make the book a valuable record of European work in linguistics during the past decades. The volume reflects the policy of the Societas Linguistica Europaea — openness to all scientifically tenable approaches to the study of languages and language.

The present book is a reference grammar of Kayardild, an Australian language spoken in the Wellesley Islands, Gulf of Carpentaria. While setting the language in its broader cultural and linguistic perspective, Nicholas Evans manages to capture its many novel features, showing how this unusual language probably evolved.

Kayardild is perhaps the most remarkable Australian language to be described since Dixon's classic grammar of Dyirbal. The richly exemplified volume should interest a wide range of linguists, from typologists and morphosyntactitians to specialists in historical linguistics, grammaticalization, case, grammatical semantics and pragmatics.

Medieval Dialectology

Mouton de Gruyter

In the past it has been detrimental to the field of historical dialectology that there was little contact between linguists working on early dialects. Medieval Dialectology reflects the work of well-known scholars and brings together researchers working on early dialects of particular languages.

The articles cover a wide range of issues concerning language variation in Old and Middle English, Old French, Middle High German, Middle Dutch, and Slavic languages. Some of the papers treat medieval dialects as a source of explanation for present-day phenomena, while one of them deals with medieval business writing.

Although the contributions usually focus on one language, their implications are much broader and concern both the research methodology of historical dialectology and general historical linguistic issues. Thus the volume will contribute to cross-fertilization in the field and stimulate further progress in the study of languages in medieval times, by collecting in one volume a number of new insights and research proposals from different quarters.

Linguistic Change under Contact Conditions

ISBN 3-11-013950-2
(Trends in Linguistics. Studies and Monographs 81)

Mouton de Gruyter

This volume is a contribution to the study of language contact and language change. Some papers deal with language contact as a source of linguistic change in particular languages, quite often with reference to specific constructions or certain aspects of phonology or grammar. A few contributions are focussed on more general issues, such as language contact and models of change or the diagnostics of what change is contact-induced.

The present volume, therefore, covers a wide spectrum of phenomena subsumed under the heading "language contact" from phonology, morphology, syntax, and vocabulary to pragmatics and sociolinguistics. The International Conference on Language Contact and Linguistic Change held at Rydzyna near Poznan in 1991, where most of the papers published were presented, has resulted in a number of interesting suggestions and concrete solutions in the field of language contact and language change which have been recorded in this volume.

Situations, Tense, and Aspect

Dynamic Discourse Ontology and the Semantic Flexibility of Temporal System in German and English

1995. 23,0 x 15,5 cm. X, 289 pages. Cloth DM 148.00 / approx. US$ 113.95
ISBN 3-11-014584-7
(Groningen-Amsterdam Studies in Semantics 13)

Mouton de Gruyter

In this book the author investigates identity conditions for situations in discourse. In discourse, situations can be referents of pronouns. The question which then arises is where and how these referents have been introduced and how they can stay the same under growing information within a discourse. The first part of the book argues that situations are intensional rather than extensional entities. The author treats situations as intensional entities introduced within a discourse by specifying place and time. In the development of her argument she refers to the question of how roles and institutions, represented by individuals and situations, are treated semantically and whether they need to be part of the text ontology.

The second and third parts of the book contain an application of the philosophical foundations provided in Part One to the semantics of tense and aspect in interaction with the "Aktionsart" of situations which specify expressions. Basic insights of Discourse Representation Theory are combined with a head-driven, flexible categorial grammar.

During the Second International Congress of Musical Signification held at the University of Helsinki in 1988, musicologists, composers, semioticians and philosophers met to discuss problems of musical meaning. Later on, other scholarly papers were added to this volume to reveal the vigorous progress the new discipline of musical semiotics has undergone during the past twenty years. Thus, Musical Signification presents the most complete anthology of semiotics in the current discussion on the semiotics of music.

Converbs in Cross-Linguistic Perspective

Structure and Meaning of Adverbial Verb Forms — Adverbial Participles, Gerunds —

1995. 23,0 x 15,5 cm. X, 565 pages. Cloth DM 298.00/approx. US$ 229.95
ISBN 3-11-014357-7
(Empirical Approaches to Language Typology 13)

Mouton de Gruyter

This volume grew out of a workshop on converbs organized by the editors at the Annual Meeting of the German Linguistic Society (DGfS) in Aachen in 1991.

Verb forms specialized for adverbial subordination (traditionally called adverbial participles, gerunds, gérondif, absolutives, sentence equivalents, etc.) can be found in a wide variety of languages. Widely diverging terminologies used by traditional grammars for such verb forms, called converbs in this book, have hindered the analysis of the properties exhibited by such converbs and related constructions across languages. Based on some earlier work, mainly by Russian linguists, this book presents a detailed and comprehensive cross-linguistic study of converbs, thus making a contribution to grammatical typology in an area where hardly any comparative work has been done so far.

In addition to ten in-depth studies of converbs in individual languages or language families (English, Russian, Hungarian, Turkic, Evenki, Japanese, Burushaski, Lezgian), the book also contains four theoretically oriented, cross-linguistic studies. These comparative chapters present and discuss criteria for the definition and identification of converbs, for their delimination from related constructions and for their division into different structural types.

A-bar Syntax

A Study in Movement Types

1995. 23,0 x 15,5 cm. X, 482 pages. Cloth DM 178.00/approx. US$ 136.95
ISBN 3-11-014496-7
(Studies in Generative Grammar 42)

Mouton de Gruyter

The main goal of this book is to present a detailed investigation of a number of movement types and especially of certain asymmetries that exist between them. The analysis is carried out within the principles and parameters framework of Generative Grammar, and is based on evidence from a variety of languages (among them German, English, Russian, Korean, Japanese, Chinese, French, Dutch, Polish, Bulgarian, Danish, Swedish, and Italian).

The movement types that are addressed are: wh-movement at S-structure (chapter 2), scrambling (chapter 3), dative movement (chapter 4), wh-movement at LF (chapter 5), and topicalization (chapter 6). It is argued that different movement types have different landing sites: wh-movement at S-structure is substitution in SpecC; scrambling is left-adjunction to XP; dative movement is substitution in the specifier of a VP-shell; topicalization is substitution in SpecT (where TP is functional projection between CP and IP); and wh-movement at LF is right-adjunction to SpecC.

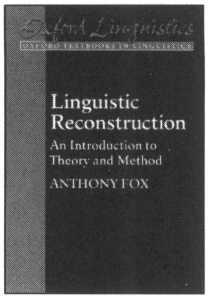

Given this state of affairs, movement type asymmetries arise as a consequence of a general Principle of Unambiguous Binding that requires variables to be bound unambiguously (i.e., from the same type of landing site(s)), and thereby precludes various cases of "improper movement". If this view of A-bar syntax is on the right track, it may significantly contribute to a better understanding of the long-standing problem of why movement types behave similarly with respect to some properties, and differ with respect to others.

Syntax and Semantics

Volume 28

Small Clauses

New!

Edited by

Anna Cardinaletti and Maria Teresa Guasti

"The topics and languages covered in this book are very impressive. There is a nice mix of semantic and syntactic contributions. I have little doubt that this will be a very influential collection of papers."

—NORBERT HORNSTEIN, University of Maryland

These previously unpublished articles offer a cross-linguistic perspective on small clauses. The book discusses subjects such as the different types of small clauses across languages and lexical items, the internal syntax of small clauses and their structure, and the general topic of the grammar of predication—ranging from a total questioning of the existence of small clauses to claims that they exist in every predication context. The editors' cross-linguistic approach addresses syntactic and lexical issues as well as the relationships between small clauses and language acquisition among children.

INFORMATION FOR CONTRIBUTORS

LANGUAGE, the journal of the Linguistic Society of America, carries technical articles dealing with problems of linguistic science, reviews of recently published linguistic works, and notes of interest to professional linguists.

MANUSCRIPTS for publication and exchange JOURNALS should be sent to the Editor of LANGUAGE (Mark Aronoff, Dept. of Linguistics, SUNY Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-4376) BOOKS for review should be sent to the Review Editor (Edwin Battistella, 209 Humanities, Wayne State College, Wayne, NE 68787). Manuscripts of articles and reviews should be submitted in FOUR copies; they will not be returned. LSA membership is not required for publication and manuscripts from non-LSA members are welcome.

An abbreviated LSA Style Sheet is provided below. For the complete Style Sheet, see the December LSA Bulletin or write to the editors.

Manuscript form. Manuscripts should be typed double-spaced throughout (including footnotes, quotations, and reference list) on $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$ inch heavy-weight bond paper (ONE SIDE ONLY), with no less than 1 inch margins on all four sides. Type size should not be smaller than 12 characters per inch. Tables, charts, diagrams, extended quotations, and other passages to be set in smaller type (though not simple rules, examples, or formulae) must each appear on a separate sheet. All pages of the manuscript must be in a single pagination.

Abstract. Each manuscript submitted for publication should be accompanied by an abstract of about 100 words, summarizing the conceptual content of the article. It should be typed on a separate sheet of paper.

Text. Use only single quotation marks—never double except for quotes within quotes. Use a single straight underscore to indicate italic type, a double underscore for SMALL CAPITALS. Use normal capitalization. A letter, word, phrase, or sentence cited as a linguistic example or subject of discussion appears in italics—or else in phonetic or phonemic transcription, enclosed in square brackets or in slant lines.

Citations. Brief citations given in the text should take such forms as 'Examples are given in Nichols 1986', 'Bloomfield (1933:264) introduced the term ...', or 'Many coastal languages of the Northwest had sounds intermediate between nasal and voiced oral stops (Kinkade 1985).'

Footnotes. All footnotes must be typed (with double spacing) on a sheet or series of sheets following the main text. They must never appear on the same sheet with the text.

References. Full citation of literature referred to should be given in a bibliography at the end of each article or review, beginning on a separate page with the heading REFERENCES, and arranged alphabetically by surnames of authors. The format should be consistent with the following examples:

Bloomfield, Leonard. 1933. Language. New York: Holt.

Bolinger, Dwight. 1965. The atomization of meaning. Language 41.555–73.

Brugmann, Karl. 1906. Grundriss der vergleichenden Grammatik der indogermanischen Sprachen. 2nd edn., vol. 2, part 1. Strassburg: Trübner.
