Activities

Herbert E. Alexander has been designated as Distinguished Professor Emeritus of Political Science at the University of Southern California. He also has been appointed to the Study Commission on Public Financing of Campaigns in Maryland.

David M. Andrews, associate professor of politics and international relations, Scripps College, has been named Senior Research Fellow at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy, for a two-year term.

Christine Keating, fellow, department of political science and Center for Women's Intercultural Leadership, Saint Mary's College.

Ned McMahon, dean's professor of applied politics, department of political science, Binghamton University, led the international delegation that monitored the West African nation of Mali's April 28 presidential election. The delegation was organized by the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs, with funding from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Pippa Norris, McGuire Lecturer in Comparative Politics, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University.

Administrative Appointments

Christopher J. Anderson, chair, department of political science, Binghamton University.

Sylvia Bashevkin, director, Canadian Studies Program, University of Toronto.

Cathy Cohen, director, Center for the Study of Race, Politics and Culture, and professor, department of political science, University of Chicago.

Wayne Cornelius, director, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, University of California, San Diego.

Sharyl Cross, chair, department of political science, San Jose State University.

Mary Durfee, special assistant to the provost, Michigan Technological University.

Jane M. Gates, dean, College of Liberal Arts & Social Sciences, Savannah State University.

Stuart C. Gilman, president, Ethics Resource Center, formerly director, strategic development, Office of the United States Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration.

Alan R. Gitelson, director, Magis Program, Loyola University, Chicago.

Charles W. Gossett, professor and chair, department of political science, California Polytechnic State University.

Charles W. Hartwig, interim department chair, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

Allen Hertzke, director, religious studies program, University of Oklahoma.

Ruth Hoogland DeHoog, head, department of political science, University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

Marisa J. Kelly, associate dean, College of the Pacific, University of the Pacific.

William M. LeoGrande, acting dean, School of Public Affairs, American University.

Robert Ostergard, associate director, Institute of Global Cultural Studies, Binghamton University.

Patrick M. Regan, director of graduate studies, department of political science, Binghamton University.

John G. Ruggie, director, Center for Business and Government, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University.

Robert J. Slagter, chair, division of behavioral and social sciences, Birmingham-Southern College.

Peter Steinberger, dean of the faculty, Reed College.

Kenneth Tolo, executive director, National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration.

FOR THE RECORD

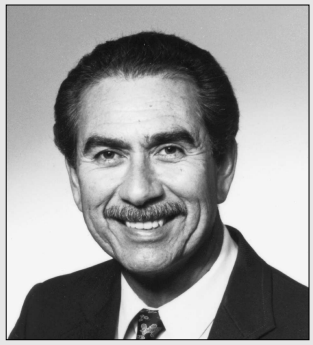

F. Chris Garcia, professor of political science at the University of New Mexico, has been named the 17th president of the university by its Board of Regents. In making the announcement, the board cited "a breadth and depth of knowledge about UNM that few others have." Garcia will hold the post for approximately a one-year period while a national search is conducted for a permanent president.

Garcia has been a member of the New Mexico faculty since 1970, before which he earned both his M.A. and B.A. from the university. He completed his dissertation at the University of California, Davis.

At UNM, Garcia was interim provost and vice president for Academic Affairs in 1993 and again in 1998–2000. He has held other administrative positions at the university including vice president for academic affairs, 1987–90; dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, 1980–86; assistant and associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, 1975–80; and, assistant director of the Division of Government Research, 1970–72.

For over thirty years he has been a leader in the field of Latino politics, authoring ten books and publishing numerous articles, book chapters, and reviews that have laid the foundation for the field. His broader areas of research and teaching include American politics, with emphasis on public opinion, campaigns and elections, and New Mexico government and politics.

Garcia noted, "This coming year will mark my 40th anniversary as a student, faculty member and administrator at UNM"…and "If the University and the community feel that my service in an administrative capacity once again is needed, then I am honored to answer that call and offer my service in the manner in which I can most be of help."

F. Chris Garcia

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Alan Zuckerman, chair, department of political science, Brown University.

New Appointments

Kevin B. Anderson, associate professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Nancy Basinger, instructor, department of political science, University of Utah.

Raymond Bazowski, assistant professor, department of political science, York University.

Mia Bloom, assistant professor, department of political science, Hofstra University.

Julie-Anne Boudreau, assistant professor, department of political science, York University.

Corey Brettschneider, assistant professor, department of political science, Brown University.

F. Erik Brooks, assistant professor, department of political science, Georgia Southern University.

Teri Caraway, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

James N.G. Cauthen, assistant professor, department of political science, University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Cathy Cohen, professor, department of political science, University of Chicago.

Constantine Danopoulos, assistant professor, department of political science, San Jose State University.

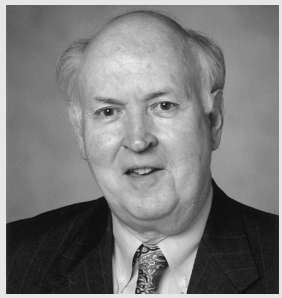

Radoslav Dimitrov, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Utah.

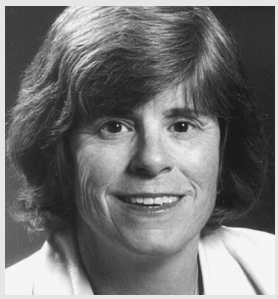

Chris Dolan, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Justin Fox, lecturer, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Russell Fox, assistant professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

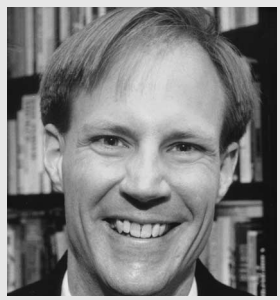

Thomas P. Lauth has been named dean of the new School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Georgia. A member of the University of Georgia faculty since 1981, he has served as chair of the department of political science since 1988. He received his Ph.D. from Syracuse University.

Cindy Simon Rosenthal has been named the Carlisle Mabrey and Lurline Mabrey Presidential Professor in the department of political science at University of Oklahoma. At the same time, she has been named associate director of the university's Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center.

John Mark Hansen has returned to the University of Chicago where he has been named dean of the Social Sciences Division. Hansen leaves Harvard University where he had served as professor of political science since 2000. He first joined the University of Chicago faculty in 1986, and his tenure included stints as chair of the political science department and associate provost for research and education.

Franklin D. Gilliam Jr., professor of political science and policy studies, and founding director of the Center for Communications and Community at the University of California, Los Angeles, has been appointed associate vice chancellor for community partnerships. In his new role Gilliam will oversee the "UCLA in LA" initiative, which links the university—through its teaching, research and service resources—to the greater Los Angeles community.

Melani Cammett, has joined the department of political science at Brown University as an assistant professor. Cammett earned her Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, where her dissertation was titled "The Divided Market: The Domestic Stakes of International Exposure in Morocco and Tunisia." She is the recipient of a number of fellowships, including a Fulbright to Jordan in 1994–95.

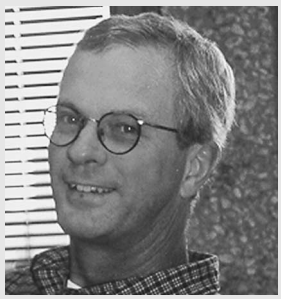

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Jennifer A. Yoder, a member of the Colby College department of government since 1996, has been promoted to associate professor with tenure. Her research interests are in German politics, the transition from communism, and transitional justice, leading to publication of her book, From East Germans to Germans? The New Postcommunist Elites (Duke University Press 1999).

Christopher J. Deering, professor of political science at George Washington University, has been named chair of the department of political science. A member of the GWU faculty since 1978, he is the co-author of Committees in Congress (CQ Press), a publication now in its third edition. He has written on a number of topics related to Congress, including congressional leadership, committees, and Congress's role in foreign and national security policymaking.

Jacob Hacker has been named Peter Strauss Family Assistant Professor in the department of political science at Yale University. He is also a fellow at the New America Foundation and was previously a junior fellow of the Harvard Society of Fellows. His book The Road to Nowhere: The Genesis of President Clinton's Plan for Health Security, was cowinner of the 1997 Louis Brownlow Book Award given by the National Academy of Public Administration.

Leonardo A. Villalon has been named director of the Center for African Studies at the University of Florida. Additionally, he will serve as associate professor in the department of political science at Florida. Most recently, he served on the faculty at the University of Kansas, where he won a 1997–98 Fulbright Scholar Lecturing and Research Award enabling him to teach and research at the Université Cheikh Anta Diop de Dakar in Senegal.

Susan Mezey, professor of political science at Loyola University, Chicago, has been named the school's Assistant Vice President for Research. Mezey will oversee faculty committees related to research and compliance as well as directing the work of committees related to internal grant support programs and special events funding.

Scott Greenwood, assistant professor, department of political science, California State University, San Marcos.

Walter Hatch, assistant professor of government, Colby College.

William B. Heller, assistant professor of political science, Binghamton University.

Claudio Holzner, instructor, department of political science, University of Utah; formerly University of Michigan.

Bernadette Jungblut, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Jonathan Kahn, lecturer, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Takashi Kanatsu, assistant professor, department of political science, Hofstra University.

Younkyoo Kim, assistant professor, department of political science, Saint Mary's College.

Barbara Kinsey, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Orin Kirshner, lecturer, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

William P. Kittredge, assistant professor, department of public administration and policy, School of Public and International Affairs, University of Georgia.

Ronald Krebs, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Glen Krutz, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Cyrus Masroori, assistant professor, department of political science, California State University, San Marcos.

Mihriye Mete, assistant professor, department of political science, School of Public and International Affairs, University of Georgia.

William McLean, assistant professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Ann Porter, assistant professor, department of political science, York University.

Elliot Posner, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Leigh S. Raymond, assistant professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Rose Razaghian, assistant professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Shawn Reichert, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Richard Saunders, assistant professor, department of political studies, York University.

Melissa A. Schwartzberg, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Scot Shraufnagel, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Central Florida.

Jennifer Segal, assistant professor, department of government, American University.

Katri K. Sieberg, assistant professor of political science, Binghamton University.

Paul Soper, lecturer, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Pamela Stricker, assistant professor, department of political science, California State University, San Marcos.

Kathleen Sullivan, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

Barry Tadlock, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

Sultan Tepe, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Illinois, Chicago.

Leonardo A. Villalon, associate professor, department of political science, University of Florida.

Erik Voeten, assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Promotions

Sheldon L. Appleton, distinguished professor of political science, Oakland University.

Timothy S. Boylan, associate professor, department of political science, Winthrop University.

Max Caproni, associate professor, political science, Loyola University, Chicago.

Alan Gerber, professor, department of political science, Yale University.

John Gilliom, professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

William Gormley, University Professor, government and public policy, Georgetown University.

Ian C. Greene, professor, department of political science, York University.

Gregg Ivers, professor, department of government, American University.

Judson L. Jeffries, associate professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Claudio Katz, professor, political science, Loyola University, Chicago.

Todd Landman, senior lecturer (associate professor) with tenure, department of government, University of Essex.

Pei-te Lien, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Utah.

David Lublin, associate professor with tenure, department of government, American University.

Robert Mayer, professor, department of political science, Loyola University, Chicago.

John McCormick, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

David McNally, professor, department of political science, York University.

Charles L. Mitchell, associate professor, department of political science and public administration, Grambling State University.

Victoria Maria Murillo, associate professor, department of political science, Yale University.

Patrick Novotny, associate professor, department of political science, Georgia Southern University.

Stephen Sloan, Samuel Roberts Noble Foundation Presidential Professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Stephen S. Smith, professor, department of political science, Winthrop University.

Joe Soss, associate professor with tenure, department of government, American University.

Michael Walsh, associate professor, department of political science, Loyola University, Chicago.

Christopher Wlezien, reader in government, Oxford University.

Retirements

B.C. Koh, professor, department of political science, University of Illinois, Chicago.

Bernard Frolic, department of political science, York University.

Lela Garner Noble, professor of political science and dean, College of Social Sciences, San Jose State University.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Aijaz Ahmad, visiting professor, department of political science, York University.

Gary J. Aichele, visiting associate professor, political science department, Wilkes University.

Holly Brasher, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Wil Burns, visiting assistant professor of government and environmental studies, Colby College.

Matt Davies, True-Visitor appointment in international relations, department of political science, York University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Margaret Ellis, visiting professor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Sam Gindi, Packer visiting professor, department of political science, York University.

Kurt Huebner, visiting professor, department of political science, York University.

Carlors Pereira, visiting assistant professor of government, Colby College.

Saeed Rahnema, visiting professor, department of political science, York University.

Steven Schier, Fulbright visiting professor, department of political science, York University.

George Thomas, visiting instructor, department of political science, University of Oklahoma.

Natasha Washington, temporary instructor, Arkansas State University.

Garry Young, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, George Washington University.

Awards

Guy B. Adams, professor and associate director, Harry S Truman School of Public Affairs, University of Missouri, Columbia, won the 2002 Best Book Award from the Social Issues in Management Division of the Academy of Management, for his book Unmasking Administrative Evil (with Danny A. Balfour, Sage Publications, 1998).

Sotirios A. Barber, professor, department of political science, University of Notre Dame, has been named an American Council of Learned Societies Fellow, awarded for postdoctoral research in the humanities and humanity-related sciences, for his work on federalism and the Constitution.

Michael H. Bernhard, associate professor, department of political science, Pennsylvania State University, was awarded an American Council of Learned Societies postdoctoral fellowship.

DeLysa Burnier, associate professor of political science, Ohio University, was awarded the university's Presidential Teaching Award, established to recognize outstanding faculty for their excellence as teachers inside and outside the classroom. The award carries a cash prize, the title of Presidential Teacher for three years, and the responsibility to share outstanding teaching practices with fellow faculty.

Timothy Byrnes, associate professor of political science, Colgate University, won the 2002 Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching.

James E. Campbell, professor of political science, University at Buffalo, the State University of New York, received a Sustained Achievement Award. This university-wide honor recognizes outstanding achievement in research during a recent segment of a scholar's career.

H. Lee Cheek, Jr., assistant professor, department of political science, Lee University, won the university's Excellence in Scholarship Award for 2001–2002.

Roger Cobb, professor, department of political science, Brown University, received the William G. McLoughlin Award for Teaching Excellence in the Social Sciences for 2001–2002.

Joshua Cohen, professor of philosophy and political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been awarded the Romanell-Phi Beta Kappa Professorship in Philosophy for 2002–2003. The Professorship, presented annually to a philosophy scholar, recognizes both distinguished achievement and a past or potential contribution to public understanding of philosophy.

Cora Sol Goldstein, department of political science, California State University, Long Beach, received a 2001

KUDOS

Rachel Roth, an assistant professor of political science and women's studies at Washington University in St. Louis, has received two fellowships to support a research sabbatical in Washington, DC, during the 2002–2003 academic year.

Her stay in Washington will allow her to focus on a working project titled "Under Lock and Key: Women's Reproductive Rights in U.S. Jails and Prisons." The project will cover a range of issues related to the reproductive rights of prisoners, including access to abortion, pregnancy care, visitation with children, and parental rights.

To support her stay, Roth has been awarded fellowships by both the American Council of Learned Societies and the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. In June ACLS named Roth as an Andrew W. Mellon Foundation Junior Faculty Fellow, one of 87 scholars selected for support through the annual ACLS Fellowship Program. In May, Roth was named as one of 22 scholars selected by the Wilson Center to serve as fellows-in-residence during the 2002–2003 academic year.

A scholar whose interests include gender, race, class, and sexuality in U.S. law and politics, as well as feminist theory, her first book, Making Women Pay: The Hidden Costs of Fetal Rights (Cornell University Press, 2000), was named one of Choice magazine's Outstanding Academic Books for 2000.

Roth joined the faculty at Washington University in 1999 after earning her doctorate in political science from Yale University and her B.A. from the University of California, Santa Cruz.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy Research Grant. The grant will allow Goldstein to work on a project titled "Imaging Human Rights: Film and Reeducation in American-Occupied Germany."

Breena A. Holland, doctoral candidate, department of political science, University of Chicago received a Charlotte W. Newcombe Dissertation Fellowship to complete her thesis, "Environment and Capability: A New Normative Approach to Environmental Value."

Carol J. Lancaster, associate professor, political science, Georgetown University, has been designated an ACLS/SSR/NEH International and Area Studies Fellow.

Howard Lehman, professor, department of political science, University of Utah, received a Fulbright Lectureship and will be a lecturer/researcher for the 2002–2003 academic year at Kyushu University in Fukuoka, Japan.

David Mayhew, professor, department of political science, Yale University, received the Graduate Mentor Award, awarded by the Yale Graduate School.

Katri K. Sieberg, assistant professor of political science, Binghamton University, has been granted a Fulbright teaching and research award at the University of Tampere in Finland for the 2002–2003 academic year.

Gwyneth Williams, associate professor, department of history, politics and law, College of Arts and Sciences, Webster University, won the 2001 William T. Kemper Award for Excellence in Teaching.

John A. Williams, professor of political science, Loyola University Chicago, has been appointed a Morris Leibman Fellow for 2002–2004.

Frank C. Zagare, professor and chair, department of political science, University at Buffalo, the State University of New York, received a Sustained Achievement Award. This university-wide honor recognizes outstanding achievement in research during a recent segment of a scholar's career.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S104909650200135X Published online by Cambridge University Press