Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, all at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

MARIE-CLAIRE BERGÈRE: is professor emeritus of modern Chinese history at the National Institute for Oriental Languages and Civilizations, Paris.

ALFRED L. CHAN is associate professor of political science at Huron University College, University of Western Ontario, London, Canada. He is the author of Mao's Crusade: Politics and Policy Implementation in China's Great Leap Forward (2001).

EVA SHAN CHOU is associate professor at City University of New York, Baruch College, and the author of Reconsidering Tu Fu: Literary Greatness and Cultural Context (Cambridge, 1996). Her articles on Lu Xun have appeared in Asia Major and The China Quarterly.

FLEMMING CHRISTIANSEN (PhD Leiden, 1990) is a senior lecturer in Chinese studies at the University of Leeds.

JANE DUCKETT is a senior lecturer in the department of politics, University of Glasgow. Her publications include The Entrepreneurial State in China (Routledge 1998), and papers on China's health and social security reforms in Social Policy and Administration, Provincial China, and The Journal of Communist Studies and Transition Politics.

ERICA DOWNS is a PhD candidate in the department of politics at Princeton University. She is the author of China's Quest for Energy Security (2000).

KARL J. FIELDS is professor of politics and government at the University of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Washington. He is the author of Enterprise and the State in Korea and Taiwan and his current book project, tentatively titled KMT, Inc., analyses the business empire owned and operated by Taiwan's Nationalist Party.

ANTONIA FINNANE is senior lecturer in Chinese history at the University of Melbourne.

POSHEK FU teaches history and cinema studies at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He is the author of Between Shanghai and Hong Kong: The Politics of Chinese Cinemas (Stanford 2003) and co-editor of The Cinema of Hong Kong: History, Arts, Identity (Cambridge, 2000).

J. MEGAN GREENE is assistant professor of history at University of Kansas. She is co-editor with Robert Ash of a forthcoming volume entitled Taiwan Encounters the Twenty-first Century: A Unique Trajectory or a Model of Development? and is finishing a book on the history of science policy in the Republic of China.

NANCY GUY is an ethnomusicologist who specializes in the study of the musics of Taiwan and China. Her book on Peking opera and politics

© The China Quarterly, 2004

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000153 Published online by Cambridge University Press in Taiwan is forthcoming from the University of Illinois Press. Guy is currently an assistant professor of music at the University of California, San Diego.

JOYCE K. KALLGREN is emeritus professor of political science at the University of California, Davis, research associate at the Institute of East Asian Studies (University of California, Berkeley) and chair of the U.S. Council on Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific.

GRACE O.M. LEE is currently associate professor in the department of public and social administration, City University of Hong Kong.

LIANJIANG LI is associate professor at the department of government and international studies of Hong Kong Baptist University. His current research project is on local government violence and villagers' collective action.

BECKY P.Y. LOO is an associate professor at the department of geography of the University of Hong Kong. Her major research interests in China studies are transportation, economic and regional development, statistical system, and central–local relationship.

COLIN MACKERRAS is Foundation Professor in China Studies at Griffith University, Australia. He has written numerous books and articles on China, especially in the field of ethnic and theatre studies. His most recent single-authored book is China's Ethnic Minorities and Globalisation and edited book is Ethnicity in Asia, both published by RoutledgeCurzon in London in 2003.

BARBARA MITTLER is associate professor at the Institute of Chinese Studies, University of Heidelberg, Germany. Her research covers a range of subjects in modern Chinese cultural history. She is the author of a monograph on new Chinese music and politics in Hong Kong, Taiwan and the PRC, and a book on the newspaper Shenbao in late-Qing Shanghai. She is currently completing a study dealing with Cultural Revolution culture.

JAMES MULVENON is a political scientist at the RAND Corporation in Washington, DC and Deputy Director of RAND's Center for Asia-Pacific Policy.

RACHEL MURPHY obtained her PhD in social and political sciences at Cambridge. Since October 2000 she has been a British Academy post-doctoral research fellow in development studies, Cambridge and has taught a course on "Population, Politics and Culture." Her publications include How Migrant Labor is Changing Rural China (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2002 and "The Impact of Labor Migration on the Well-being and Agency of Rural Women" in On the Move: Women in China's Rural-Urban Migration edited by T. Jacka and A. Gaetano (Columbia University Press in press).

RAMON H. MYERS is Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution and consultant to the Hoover Institution Archives.

ANDREW J NATHAN is Class of 1919 Professor of Political Science and chair, department of political science, at Columbia University. His most recent book is China's New Rulers (second edition, 2003), co-authored with Bruce Gilley.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000153 Published online by Cambridge University Press

RANDY PEERENBOOM is professor of law at the UCLA School of Law. His most recent book is China's Long March toward Rule of Law.

FRANK N. PIEKE is lecturer in the modern politics of China and fellow of St Cross College at the University of Oxford. His most recent book is Transnational Chinese: Fujianese migrants in Europe (with Pál Nyíri, Mette Thunø and Antonella Ceccagno).

KAI-YUEN TSUI is currently a professor with the department of economics, the Chinese University of Hong Kong. His current research interests include Chinese public finance and regional disparities in China.

FEI-LING WANG is associate professor and director of the program on Chinese political economy at the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology. He is the author of Institutions and Institutional Change in China: Premodernity and Modernization (1998) and From Family to Market: Labor Allocation in Contempoary China (1998), and the co-editor of In the Eyes of the Dragon: China Views the World (1999). He is currently completing a manuscript on China's hukou system and co-editing a book on the motivation of China's foreign policy.

WANG YOUQIANG received his PhD in mathematics from Ohio University, and his PhD in economics from the University of Maryland at College Park. Currently, he is a full professor in the school of public policy and management at Tsinghua University, China. His research interests are in the fields of public finance and the Chinese economy.

MALCOLM WARNER is currently professor and fellow, Wolfson College and Judge Institute of Management, University of Cambridge.

YONGPING WU is associate professor in the School of Public Policy and Management, Tsinghua University, and the founding editor of Public Administration Review, a Chinese journal edited by the School and published by Tsinghua University Press.

RAY YEP is assistant professor in the department of public and social administration, City University of Hong Kong. His most recent book is Manager Empowerment in China: Political Implications of Rural Industrialization in the Reform Era.

DAVID ZWEIG is professor of social science at Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. He is the author of Agrarian Radicalism in China, 1968 – 1981, China's Brain Drain to the U.S., and Freeing China's Farmers. His most recent book, Internationalizing China: Domestic Interests and Global Linkages, was published in 2002 by Cornell University Press in the Cornell Series in Political Economy.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000153 Published online by Cambridge University Press