New 2009–2010 APSA Officers Elected

Henry E. Brady, the Class of 1941 Monroe Deutsch Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at the University of California, Berkeley, became the association's 106th president on September 6 at the close of the APSA Annual Meeting. Peter Katzenstein of Cornell University, APSA's outgoing president, symbolically passed the gavel to Brady at the association's General Membership Meeting on September 5. Joining Brady in guiding the association are five new officers. Eight new members of the council will be elected in an all-member election during the month of October. Details on the results of the election will be available on the Web and in the January issue of PS.

Outgoing president Peter Katzenstein passes the gavel to incoming president Henry Brady.

Henry E. Brady is the dean of Berkeley's Goldman School of Public Policy and faculty director of Berkeley's Survey Research Center and the University of California Data Archive and Technical Assistance (UC DATA) program. Before Berkeley, Brady taught at Boston University, Harvard University, and the University of Chicago. Brady's contributions to APSA include service as vice president, as treasurer, as a member of the council, as co-chair (with Margaret Weir) of the 2003 Program Committee, and as organizer of panels for the Political Methodology section and the Public Opinion and Voting section. He is past president and a founding member of the Political Methodology Society.

Brady's scholarly work includes publications on political methodology, political behavior, and public policy. His work examines the interaction between the mass public and elites in both democratic and transitional societies. He is the author or co-author of over 60 professional articles. His books include Letting the People Decide (with Richard Johnston, Andre Blais, and Jean Crete, 1992) on the Canadian election of 1988 (winner of the Canadian government's Harold Adams Innis Award for best book in the social sciences) and Voice and Equality (with Sidney Verba and Kay Schlozman, 1995) on political participation in America (winner of the Converse award).

In 2004 Brady was elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and in 2006 he was elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His service to the profession includes membership on the Board of the American National Election Studies; the National Science Foundation's Advisory Committee on Social, Behavioral, and Economic Sciences; and Advisory Committee on Cyber Infrastructure. He has also worked with others to create the EITM (Empirical Implications of Theoretical Models) summer program. A full intellectual biography of President Brady appears on page 793.

Assuming the position of president-elect is Carole Pateman, distinguished professor of political science at UCLA and honorary professor in the School of European Studies (EUROS) at Cardiff University (UK). Her research interests are broad ranging but lie particularly in democratic theory and early modern and modern political theory, especially theories of original contracts and contemporary contract theory, all of which she has for many years approached with a feminist eye. From 1991–94 she served as (the first woman) president of the International Political Science Association. During 1980–81 she was president of the Australasian Political Studies Association. She was a member of the Council of the APSA, 1985–87. She currently serves as a member of the International Advisory Board for the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences. She continues to be a member of the editorial boards of a number of journals, including the British Journal of Political Science and the APSR, and is an associate editor of the Journal of Political Philosophy. She is also the series editor of the Ethikon Series in Comparative Ethics.

Other 2009–10 officers include:

Vice presidents: Michael A. Jones-Correa, Cornell University; Jane Y. Junn, University of Southern California; and Atul Kohli, Princeton University

Secretary: Roxanne L. Euben, Wellesley College

Treasurer: Arthur Lupia, University of Michigan
