Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, all at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

HUGH D. R. BAKER is emeritus professor of Chinese and dean of SOAS Interface at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

DANIEL H. BAYS is professor of history and director of the Asian studies programme at Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Michigan. He is professor emeritus at the University of Kansas. He is editor of Christianity in China (1996), and co-editor with Grant Wacker of The Foreign Missionary Movement at Home (2003).

RAOUL BIRNBAUM is professor of Buddhist studies at the University of California, Santa Cruz. His many publications focus on Buddhist practices and representations in China, from medieval times to the present.

CONG CAO is a research fellow at the East Asian Institute, National University of Singapore. He is the author of China's Scientific Elite (forthcoming).

NANCY N. CHEN is associate professor of anthropology at the University of California, Santa Cruz. A medical anthropologist, she is author of Breathing Spaces: Qigong, Psychiatry, and Healing in China (2003), and co-editor of China Urban: Ethnographies of Contemporary Culture (2001).

KENNETH DEAN is the Lee professor of Chinese culture in the department of East Asian studies, McGill University. He is the author of First and Last Emperors: The Absolute State and the Body of the Despot (with Brian Massumi), Taoist Ritual and Popular Cults of Southeast China, and Lord of the Three in One: The Spread of a Cult in Southeast China. He is currently editing several volumes of epigraphical materials on the history of religion in Fujian.

BRUCE J. DICKSON is associate professor of political science and international affairs at the George Washington University. His most recent book is Red Capitalists in China: The Party, Private Entrepreneurs, and the Prospects for Political Change (2003).

ARIF DIRLIK is Knight professor of social science and professor of history and anthropology at the University of Oregon. His latest publications include Postmodernity's Histories: The Past as Legacy and Project, and two edited volumes, Chinese on the American Frontier, and, with Roxann Prazniak, Places and Politics in an Age of Globalization.

FAN LIZHU is professor of sociology at Fudan University, where she teaches sociology of religion, religion and Chinese society. Her most recent publication is Religious Development in Contemporary China: A Case Study in Shenzhen. Her current research focuses on

© The China Quarterly, 2003

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443903000342 Published online by Cambridge University Press

temple festivals in northern China, and spiritual nourishment and religious development in China.

DAFYDD FELL did his BA in modern Chinese studies at the University of Leeds. At present he is a PhD student in the department of political studies, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. His dissertation is examining party platform change in Taiwan's 1990s elections.

DRU C. GLADNEY is professor of Asian studies and anthropology at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa. He is author of Muslim Chinese: Ethnic Nationalism in the People's Republic (1996, second edition), Ethnic Identity in China: The Making of a Muslim Minority Nationality (1998), Making Majorities: Constituting the Nation in Japan, China, Korea, Malaysia, Fiji, Turkey, and the U.S. (editor, 1998), and Dislocating China: Muslims, Minorities, and Other Sub-Altern Subjects (in press). For online articles and research projects, see http://www.hawaii.edu/dru.

THOMAS B. GOLD is a member of the sociology department at the University of California, Berkeley. He is writing Remaking Taiwan: Society and the State Since the End of Martial Law.

JOSHUA GOLDSTEIN is assistant professor of East Asian history at Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

LEO F. GOODSTADT is an adjunct professor in the School of Business Studies, Trinity College, University of Dublin, and an honorary fellow of the University of Hong Kong. He was chief policy adviser to the Hong Kong government from 1989 to 1997 as head of its Central Policy Unit.

STEVAN HARRELL is professor of anthropology and curator of Asian ethnology at the Burke Museum, University of Washington. His recent research includes continuing attempts, together with Han Hua, Darryl J. Holman and Wang Yuesheng, to trace fertility and mortality transitions in Xiaoshan, Zhejiang, through both genealogical research on late-Ming and Qing populations and survey research on contemporary behaviour.

HSIUNG PING-CHEN is a research fellow at Academia Sinica, Taipei, and visiting professor at National Taipei Normal University. She has researched, and is widely published in, the fields of childhood and gender roles, paediatrics, and social and cultural history in the late imperial Chinese context.

PAUL R. KATZ is an associate research fellow at the Institute of Modern History, Academia Sinica. He specializes in the study of local religious traditions in China and Taiwan. His most recent publications include Demon Hordes and Burning Boats: The Cult of Marshal Wen in Late Imperial Chekiang (1995), The Cult of the Royal Lords in Taiwan (in Chinese, 1997), and Images of the Immortal. The Cult of Lü Dongbin at the Palace of Eternal Joy (1999).

RICHARD KRAUS teaches politics at the University of Oregon. He writes about conflicts over culture in China and in Sino-Western relations.

BARBARA KRUG is professor of organization theory and economics of governance, and head of department at the Rotterdam School of Management. Her special field of research is the Chinese economy and her empirical research focuses on long-term business relations in transition economies and situations of high uncertainty in the nascent private business sector in China.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443903000342 Published online by Cambridge University Press

FUNG KWAN teaches economics and co-ordinates the economics programme at the University of Macau. His research interests focus on development and rural economics in China, with an emphasis on labour issues.

LAI CHI-TIM is associate professor of Daoism in the department of religion at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He lectures on the history of Daoism, Daoist classics, Daoist ritual and Hong Kong Daoism. He received his PhD from the Divinity School, University of Chicago, in Daoism and the history of religion.

XIAORONG LI is a research scholar at the Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy, University of Maryland. Her research focuses on political philosophy and ethics, theories of justice, human rights and democracy, and issues related to human rights and cultural traditions in China

TIK-SANG LIU is assistant professor at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. His research interests focus on the coastal communities and local religious activities in the Zhu [Pearl] River estuary area of South China.

RICHARD MADSEN is professor of sociology at the University of California, San Diego. His most recent books include China's Catholics: Tragedy and Hope in an Emerging Civil Society (1998), and Popular China: Unofficial Culture in a Globalizing Society, co-edited with Perry Link and Paul Pickowicz (2002).

FRAN MONKS graduated from Leeds University in Chinese and Japanese and has a masters in environmental technology from Imperial College, University of London. She has worked on a wide range of scenario projects in the private and voluntary sector.

DANIEL L. OVERMYER is professor emeritus at the department of Asian studies and the Centre for Chinese Research, University of British Columbia. He researches the ideas, beliefs and values of ordinary people in China, and currently focuses on community rituals and beliefs of villages in Hebei province and on comparing such traditions in China with those in other parts of the world.

PITMAN B. POTTER is director of the Institute of Asian Research at the University of British Columbia. He is also professor of law and director of Chinese legal studies at UBC Law Faculty.

MICHAEL SCHOENHALS is director of the Centre for East and South-East Asian Studies, Lund University, and associate professor of Sinology with special emphasis on modern Chinese society and politics.

STEVE TSANG is the Louis Cha senior research fellow and university reader in politics at St. Antony's College, Oxford University, where he also serves as director of the Asian Studies Centre from 1997 to 2003. His two new books, The Cold War's Odd Couple: The

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443903000342 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Unintended Partnership between the Republic of China and the United Kingdom, 1950–1958 and A Modern History of Hong Kong, will be published in 2003.

ZHOU XUN is an ESRC research fellow in the department of history, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. She is the author of Chinese Perceptions of the 'Jews' and Judaism: A History of Youtai (2001), and is currently working on a history of drug consumption in China.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443903000342 Published online by Cambridge University Press