APSA Recognizes Outstanding Accomplishments During Annual Meeting

The Association honored 21 members for career achievements and outstanding research at the APSA Awards Ceremony in Boston. Hosted by 2002 Program Co-Chairs W. Phillips Shively and Kathryn Sikkink, the ceremony drew nearly 300 attendees. Following the ceremony, 2002 APSA President Robert D. Putnam delivered his Presidential Address, "The Public Role of Political Science," which will appear in the inaugural issue of Perspectives on Politics this March.

The Association honored five individuals for their major contributions to the profession and our understanding and practice of politics. The Association was pleased to honor Hugh Heclo of George Mason University with the John Gaus Award honoring a lifetime of exemplary scholarship in the joint traditions of political science and public administration. In conjunction with receiving the Gaus Award, Heclo delivered the annual John Gaus lecture, titled "The Spirit of Public Administration." The Gaus lecture appears in this issue of PS.

The James Madison Award, presented once every three years to an American political scientist who has made a distinguished scholarly contribution to field, was given to David Mayhew of Yale University. In the citation recognizing Mayhew, the award committee noted, "It is hard to think of anyone since V.O. Key who has had as great an impact on the study of political parties and political institutions as Key's most famous student, David Mayhew. Both scholars share a remarkably rare combination of theoretical ambition, careful scholarship, substantive breadth, deep expertise, and elegant writing." Mayhew's lecture, "Super Majority Rule in the U.S. Senate," will appear in the January issue of PS.

The Carey McWilliams Award, presented annually to an individual who has made a major journalistic contribution to the understanding of politics, was presented to two of today's foremost political writers, Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times and Janet Hook of The Los Angeles Times. Their contributions to the discipline were noted: "Linda Greenhouse and Janet Hook have covered the [Supreme] Court and the Congress, respectively, for many years. . . Perhaps the most fitting testimony to their insight and reliability is the frequency with which political scientists cite their work."

The Hubert H. Humphrey Award, presented each year in recognition of notable public service by a political scientist, was given to the Honorable Parris N. Glendening, Governor of the State of Maryland. A 1967 Ph.D. recipient in political science from Florida State University, Glendening taught for over 20 years at the University of Maryland before serving the public in elected roles as city councilman, county councilman, county executive, and, finally, two-term governor. The award committee noted, "Parris Glendening has demonstrated by his achievements that academic knowledge added to political skill can be a formidable combination."

Recognizing excellence. Nancy Scherer, a faculty member at the University of Miami, accepts the Edward S. Corwin award from committee member Keith Whittington of Princeton University.

Eight dissertation prizes were awarded to young scholars who had completed their doctoral studies in 2000 or 2001. The political science departments at the University of Chicago and the University of California, Berkeley produced two winners each.

The Gabriel A. Almond prize for the best dissertation in comparative politics was awarded to Evan S. Lieberman, Princeton University. Lieberman completed "Payment for Privilege? Race and Space in the Politics of Taxation in Brazil and South Africa" under the direction of Robert Price and Ruth Berins Collier at the University of California, Berkeley.

The 2002 William Anderson Award for the best doctoral dissertation in the general field of federalism, intergovernmental relations, or state and local politics was awarded to David Stuligross, Colgate University. Stuligross completed his dissertation, "A Piece of Land to Call One's Own," under the direction of Jyotirindra Das Gupta at the University of California, Berkeley.

Nancy Scherer, University of Miami, won the Edward S. Corwin award for "Making a Point: The Politicization of Lower Federal Court Appointments in the Modern Political Era." Gerald N. Rosenberg, University of Chicago, served as chair of Scherer's committee. The Corwin Award is given for the best doctoral dissertation in the field of public law.

The Harold D. Lasswell Award for the best dissertation in policy studies was presented to David H. Bradley of the Keystone Research Center in Pennsylvania for his work "The Political Economy of Employment Performance: Testing the Deregulation Thesis." Bradley completed his dissertation under the direction of John D. Stephens at the University of North Carolina.

Tanisha Fazal of Columbia University received the Helen Dwight Reid Award for the best doctoral dissertation in international relations, law, and politics. Fazal wrote her dissertation, "Born to Lose and Doomed to Survive: State Death and Survival in the International System," under the direction of Stephen D. Krasner and Scott D. Sagan at Stanford University.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096502001403 Published online by Cambridge University Press

The E.E. Schattschneider Award for the best doctoral dissertation in the field of American government and politics was awarded to Deborah Gould of the University of Chicago for "Sex, Death, and the Politics of Anger: Emotions and Reason in ACT UP's Fight Against AIDS." William H. Sewell Jr. at the University of Chicago, served as her dissertation chair.

The Leo Strauss Award, for the best doctoral dissertation completed and accepted in 2000 or 2001 in the field of political philosophy, was presented to Andreas Kalyvas of the University of Michigan. He completed his dissertation "The Politics of the Extraordinary: Max Weber, Carl Schmitt, Hannah Arendt," under the direction of Jean Cohen at Columbia University.

The Leonard D.White Award for the best doctoral dissertation completed and accepted in 2000 or 2001 in the field of public administration was given to Gregory Huber, currently at Yale University. He completed his winning dissertation, "Interests & Influence: Explaining Patterns of Enforcement in Government Regulation of Occupational Safety," was completed under the direction of R. Douglas Arnold at Princeton University.

Only one award was presented in the paper and article category in 2002. The Heinz Eulau Award for the best article published in the American Political Science Review during 2001 was given to Lars-Erik Cederman of Harvard University, for his work "Back to Kant: Reinterpreting the Democratic Peace as a Macrohistorical Learning Process," published in the March issue.

Four book awards were also presented. Michael Dawson of Harvard University was awarded the Ralph Bunche Award for his book, Black Visions: The Roots of Contemporary African-American Political Ideologies (University of Chicago Press). The Bunche award is given for the year's best scholarly work in political science which explores the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism.

The Gladys M. Kammerer Award, given for the best political science publication in 2001 in the field of U.S. national policy, was awarded to Daniel Carpenter of Harvard University, for his work, The Forging of Bureaucratic Autonomy (Princeton University Press).

The 2002 Victoria Schuck Award, for the best book published in 2001 on women and politics, was shared by Sidney Verba, Harvard University; Kay Lehman Schlozman, Boston College; and Nancy E. Burns, University of Michigan, for The Private Roots of Public Action: Gender, Equality, and Political Participation (Harvard University Press), and by Joshua S. Goldstein of American University for War and Gender: How Gender Shapes the War System and Vice Versa (Cambridge University Press).

The Race Card: Campaign Strategy, Implicit Messages, and the Norm of Equality (Princeton University Press), authored by Tali Mendelberg of Princeton University, was named winner of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award. The prize is given for the best book published in 2001 on government, politics, or international affairs.

APSA will present 20 awards at the 2003 Annual Meeting in Philadelphia. Nomination and submission information is available on the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org>.

Program Wizards. Program co-chairs Phil Shively (left) and Kathryn Sikkink ably led a meeting that featured over 700 panels sessions.

For Members Only

Did you know that you can now access complete copies of the American Political Science Review and PS: Political Science and Politics online?

Just log into myAPSA at www.apsanet.org. You'll find links to the online journals as part of APSA's partnership with Cambridge University Press.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096502001403 Published online by Cambridge University Press