Contributors

ANA MARIA AMARO is senior professor and head of the Centre for Chinese Studies at the Instituto Superior de Ciências Sociais e Politicas, Lisbon Technical University. Her publications include Three Popular Macao Games: Choca, Talú, Bafá (1984), Children of the Earth (1988), From Thatched Cabins to Concrete Skyscrapers, thus Macao was Born (1997) and The Chinese World: A Lengthy Dialogue of Two Cultures (1998).

ROBERT F. ASH holds the Chiang Ching-kuo Chair of Taiwan studies at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He is also co-ordinator of the EU–China Academic Network (ECAN).

MARTIJN VAN BEEK is associate professor in the Department of Ethnography and Social Anthropology at the University of Aarhus in Denmark. His main research interests include the connections between global processes of development, state formation and identification, with a regional focus on the Tibetan world. His most recent publication is "Beyond identity fetishism: 'communal' conflict in Ladakh and the limits of autonomy," Cultural Identity, 15 (4).

KJELD ERIK BRØDSGAARD is associate professor at the Department of Asian Studies, University of Copenhagen, and visiting professor at the Asia Research Centre, Copenhagen Business School. His most recent book is China and Denmark: Relations Since 1674 (2000).

CONG CAO is at the Center for Asian Pacific Studies, University of Oregon. His research focuses on China's scientific and technological development. He has been working with Richard P. Suttmeier on a study of the Chinese scientific community.

CHIEN-MIN CHAO is director of the Dr. Sun Yat-sen Graduate Institute for Social Sciences and Humanities at National Chengchi University, Taipei.

STEPHAN FEUCHTWANG is a professorial research fellow in anthropology at the London School of Economics. He has just published new editions of his books on Chinese religion and on Chinese geomancy, and has co-authored Grassroots Charisma: Four Local Leaders in China with Wang Mingming.

JORGE MANUEL FLORES taught at the University of Macau and currently is lecturer at the Centre for Asian Studies, University of Aveiro, Portugal. He is the author of a number of articles and books on the Portuguese presence in maritime Asia (16th–18th centuries) and has contributed to the História dos Portugueses do Extremo Oriente, edited by A. H. de Oliveira Marques, 5 volumes, 1998–2002.

JOHN W. GARVER is professor in the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs at Georgia Institute of Technology and an associate of the China Research Center at www.chinacenter.net. He specializes in Chinese foreign relations. His most recent book is Protracted Contest: Sino-Indian Rivalry in the Twentieth Century (2001).

© The China Quarterly, 2001

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443901000626 Published online by Cambridge University Press

AVERY GOLDSTEIN is professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania and director of the Asia programme at the Foreign Policy Research Institute. He is the author of Deterrence and Security in the 21st Century: China, Britain, France and the Enduring Legacy of the Nuclear Revolution and From Bandwagon to Balance-of-Power Politics: Structural Constraints and Politics in China, 1949–1978.

LYLE J. GOLDSTEIN is an associate professor of strategic studies at the Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island. He specializes in both Chinese and Russian security policy. His research has also appeared in Armed Forces & Society, Journal of Slavic Military Studies and Security Studies.

RUTH HAYHOE is director of the Hong Kong Institute of Education. She has edited and written numerous books relating to Chinese education, including Education, Culture and Identity in Twentieth Century China (co-edited with Glen Peterson and Yongling Lu) and Knowledge Across Cultures: A Contribution to Dialogue Among Civilizations (co-edited with Julia Pan).

J. BRIAN HEATON served in the Education Department of the Hong Kong Government from 1956 to 1968, leaving to take up a post at the University of Leeds, where he later became senior lecturer and director of the English Language Unit for Overseas Students. From 1976 to 1979, he was a visiting professor in education in Singapore before returning to Leeds where he continued to work until recent retirement.

CAROLINE HOY is a research fellow in the Department of Geography, University of Dundee.

JOHN FUH-SHENG HSIEH is professor of government and international studies and the director of the Center for Asian Studies at the University of South Carolina. He has written extensively on constitutional choice, electoral systems, electoral behaviour, democratization and foreign policy.

RALPH W. HUENEMANN holds the chair in economic relations with China at the University of Victoria, Canada.

CHANG-TAI HUNG is professor of humanities in the Division of Humanities at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. His publications on modern Chinese cultural history include War and Popular Culture: Resistance in Modern China, 1937–1945 (1994).

ROBYN RAE IREDALE is a human geographer within the School of Geosciences at the University of Woollongong. She has researched and published widely in the area of migration, settlement and social change in Australia and Asia. She recently completed a book (with Bilik, Wang, Guo and Hoy) on the implications of minority mobility in China.

RYOSEI KOKUBUN is the director of the Centre for Area Studies and professor of political science at the Keio University in Tokyo. He works on contemporary Chinese politics and East Asian foreign relations.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443901000626 Published online by Cambridge University Press

HONG LIU teaches at the Department of Chinese Studies, National University of Singapore. In addition to publishing three books in Chinese, his English-language articles on the Chinese overseas and Sino-South East Asian interations have appeared in The China Quarterly, World Politics, Journal of Southeast Asian Studies and Asian Studies Review.

WILLIAM T. LIU is professor emeritus of sociology, psychiatry and public health at the University of Illinois. He was formerly national director of the Pacific/Asian Mental Health Research Centre.

EDWARD A. MCCORD is an associate professor of history and international affairs at George Washington University. He is the author of The Power of the Gun: The Emergence of Modern Chinese Warlordism and is currently working on a study of militia organization in Hunan in the 1920s and 1930s.

SHELLEY RIGGER is the Brown Associate Professor of Political Science at Davidson College in North Carolina. She has written two books on Taiwan politics, Politics in Taiwan: Voting for Democracy (1999) and From Opposition to Power: Taiwan's Democratic Progressive Party (2001). She earned her PhD in government from Harvard University in 1994.

LESTER ROSS is an attorney in private practice in Beijing and New York.

EBERHARD SANDSCHNEIDER is director of the Centre for Chinese and East Asian Studies at the Freie Universität in Berlin and concurrently dean of the Department of Political and Social Sciences.

AXEL SCHNEIDER is professor of modern Chinese studies at the Sinological Institute, Leiden University.

ROGER MARK SELYA is professor of geography at the University of Cincinnati. He recently completed a study of development and demographic change in Taiwan. He is currently working on an annotated bibliography of pre-1974 English language geographic journal literature on China. His most recent publication is Taiwan as an Incubator (2001).

ARVINDER SINGH is head of the Economic Research Unit of the Institute of Chinese Studies at the Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, Delhi.

ALVIN Y. SO is a professor in the Division of Social Sciences at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology.

JONATHAN D. SPENCE is the Sterling Professor of History at Yale University. His recent publications include The Search for Modern China (second edition), The Chan's Great Continent, Mao Zedong and Treason by the Book.

RICHARD P. SUTTMEIER is professor of political science at the University of Oregon and has written on Chinese science and technology issues for many years.

WENFANG TANG is an associate professor of political science at the University of Pittsburg. His most recent book, co-authored with William Parish, Chinese Urban Life under Reform: The Changing Social Contract, covers a wide range of political and social issues in urban China.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443901000626 Published online by Cambridge University Press

METTE THUNØ is associate professor of Chinese at the Department of Asian Studies, University of Copenhagen. Her current research interests include PRC policies on Chinese overseas, transnationalism among Chinese migrants in Europe and emigration from villages in Fujian.

PETER ZARROW is senior lecturer in Chinese history at the University of New South Wales in Sydney. His research focuses on the causes and effects of the collapse of the Chinese emperorship in the late 19th and and early 20th centuries. He is working on a manuscript entitled "Twentieth-century China: an interpretive history."

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443901000626 Published online by Cambridge University Press