Contributors

ANA CRISTINA DIAS ALVES is assistant lecturer in the Department of International Relations at the Instituto Superior de Ciências Sociais e Políticas da Universidade Técnica de Lisboa, researching the Chinese diaspora in South-East Asia.

ROBERT ASH holds the Chiang Ching-kuo Chair of Taiwan studies at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

HUGH D. R. BAKER is professor of Chinese at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He has specialized in the social anthropology of Hong Kong and China, and has a wide range of publications including A Chinese Lineage Village: Sheung Shui and Chinese Family and Kinship.

LOUISE BEYNON is a British Academy-funded post-doctoral research fellow in the Department of Anthropology at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, researching the impact of state enterprise reform on unemployment, social security provision and urban poverty in Chengdu.

MARC J. BLECHER is professor of politics and East Asian studies at Oberlin College. His most recent books are China Against the Tides (second edition forthcoming and recently translated into Chinese and Korean) and Tethered Deer: Government and Economy in a Chinese County (with Vivian Shue). He is presently at work on a book provisionally entitled A World to Lose: Workers' Politics and the Chinese State.

KJELD ERIK BRØDSGAARD is associate professor at the Department of Asian Studies, University of Copenhagen, and a visiting professor at the Asia Research Centre, Copenhagen Business School. His most recent book (with Bertel Heurlin) is China's Place in Global Geopolitics: Domestic, Regional and International Challenges.

YONGSHUN CAI teaches in the Department of Political Science at the National University of Singapore. He received his Ph.D. in political science from Stanford University in 2001.

CONG CAO is a research fellow at the East Asian Institute at the National University of Singapore. His interests include China's science policy, high-tech development, and the changing nature of the Chinese scientific community.

YUK-SHING CHENG is assistant professor in economics at Hong Kong Baptist University. He has published on various areas of Chinese economy, including agricultural pricing policy, fiscal reforms and income inequality.

JUNE TEUFEL DREYER is professor and chair of the Political Science Department at the University of Miami, Florida.

PHILIPPE FORÊT is an associate researcher at the Japan Research Centre in the School for Advanced Studies in Social Sciences (EHESS) in Paris, and the author of Mapping Chengde: The Qing Landscape Enterprise (2000).

JOHN GARVER is a professor in the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Insitute of Technology. His most recent book is Protracted Contest: Sino-Indian Rivalry in the Twentieth Century (2001).

© The China Quarterly, 2002

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000311 Published online by Cambridge University Press

THOMAS B. GOLD teaches sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, and is executive director of the Inter-University Program in Chinese Language Studies at Tsinghua University, Beijing. He has recently co-edited books on guanxi and entrepreneurs in China and Europe. He is writing books on socio-political changes in Taiwan and on private business in China.

STEVEN M. GOLDSTEIN is Sophia Smith professor of government at Smith College.

THOMAS R. GOTTSCHANG is associate professor of economics at the College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Massachusetts. He is co-author of Swallows and Settlers: The Great Migration from North China to Manchuria (2000).

KEITH HOWARD is senior lecturer in music at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, and editor of True Stories of the Korean Comfort Women (1995).

CHRISTOPHER R. HUGHES is director of the Asia Research Centre at the London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London.

CHANG-TAI HUNG is professor of humanities in the Division of Humanities at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, and a historian specializing in modern Chinese cultural history.

WILLIAM HURST is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. His current research focuses on laid-off workers and state-owned enterprise reform.

Y. Y. KUEH is chair professor of economics at Lingnan University, Hong Kong. He is author of Agricultural Instability in China, 1931–1991: Weather, Technology, and Institutions and Industrial Reform and Macroeconomic Instability in China. He has also published widely on China's foreign trade and foreign investment, and on economic integration between Hong Kong and China.

GREGORY B. LEE is professor of Chinese studies, Université Jean Moulin, Lyon. His publications include Chinas Unlimited: Making the Imaginaries of China and Chineseness (2002), La Chine et le Spectre de l'Occident (2002) and The Boy Who Catches Wasps: Selected Poems of Duoduo (2002).

LEONG H. LIEW is an associate professor in the School of International Business and Asian Studies, Griffith University, Australia.

DIC LO is lecturer in economics at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He is author of Market and Institutional Regulation in Chinese Industrialization, 1978–94 (1997) and China's Transformational Growth: A Structural–Institutional Analysis (2001), and a number of journal articles on China's political economy.

RAYMOND C. W. NG holds a Ph.D. in economics from Lancaster University. He is a lecturer in the School of Continuing Studies at Hong Kong Baptist University.

TIM OAKES is assistant professor of geography at the University of Colorado at Boulder. He is the author of Tourism and Modernity in China (1998).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000311 Published online by Cambridge University Press

KEVIN J. O'BRIEN is professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley. His current research focuses on contentious politics in the Chinese countryside.

DOROTHY J. SOLINGER is professor of political science at the University of California, Irvine and senior adjunct research scholar in the East Asian Institute, Columbia University. Her most recent book is Contesting Citizenship in Urban China, and her current work is on unemployment and social welfare reform.

MALCOLM WARNER is currently professor and fellow of Wolfson College, Cambridge, and a member of faculty at the Judge Institute of Management Studies, University of Cambridge. He is co-editor of the Asia Pacific Business Review.

HARRY X. WU is an associate professor in the Department of Business, Hong Kong Polytechnic University.

MAYFAIR MEI-HUI YANG is professor of anthropology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. She has published Gifts, Favors and Banquets: the Art of Social Relationships (1994), edited Spaces of Their Own: Women's Public Sphere in Transnational China (1999), and produced/directed the documentary film, Through Chinese Women's Eyes (1997). She is currently engaged with the issue of state modernity and an indigenous civil society in a study of the revival of popular religion and lineages in rural Wenzhou.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0009443902000311 Published online by Cambridge University Press