NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Denis G. Arnold is the Jule and Marguerite Surtman Distinguished Scholar in Business Ethics and associate professor of management, Belk College of Business, University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He is the editor in chief of Business Ethics Quarterly and a past president of the Society for Business Ethics. His research focuses on the ethical dimensions of international business and ethics and public policy regarding the pharmaceutical industry. E-mail: denisarnold@uncc.edu.

Cynthia E. Clark is an assistant professor of management, the director of the Harold S. Geneen Institute of Corporate Governance, and a research fellow at the Center for Business Ethics at Bentley University. She received her PhD from Boston University where she was also on the faculty. Her research focus lies at the intersection of social, ethical, and governance issues in organizations, with a particular interest in how the organizational context (e.g., firm practices, conflicts of interest) and the broader institutional environment affect firm behaviors and external responses. Recently published work has appeared in Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, and Business & Society. She is also an active member of the International Association of Business and Society, having previously served on its board, the Academy of Management, the Strategic Management Society, and the Society for Business Ethics. E-mail: cclark@bentley.edu.

Andrew Gustafson is associate professor of business ethics and society at Creighton University's College of Business. Prior to that he was associate professor at Bethel University's philosophy department. He has published articles in Business Ethics Quarterly, Business and Society Review, Business Ethics: A European Review, British Journal of the History of Philosophy, International Philosophical Quarterly, Teaching Ethics, and Philosophia Christi. His research interests include Mill's utilitarianism, business' effect on society, casinos, marketing ethics, philosophy of religion and Lev Shestov. E-mail: andrewgustafson@creighton.edu.

Howard Harris is associate head of school: research in the School of Management, University of South Australia. His first degree was in chemical engineering and he worked in industry before completing his PhD in applied ethics. His research interests are in the relevance of classical virtues in contemporary management and in the teaching of business and professional ethics. His work has appeared in journals such as Business Ethics: A European Review, Journal of Business Ethics, Business and Professional Ethics Journal, and Philosophy of Management. He has served as president of the Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics. E-mail: howard.harris@unisa.edu.au.

Jeffrey S. Harrison is the W. David Robbins Chair of Strategic Management at the Robins School of Business, University of Richmond. Prior to his current appointment, he was the Fred G. Peelen Professor of Global Hospitality Strategy at Cornell University. He currently serves as program chair of the Stakeholder Strategy

©2013 Business Ethics Quarterly 23:1 (January 2013); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 165–168
DOI: 10.5840/beq201323111

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Interest Group at the Strategic Management Society, an interest group he helped found. Jeff is on the editorial review board of Strategic Management Journal and previously served nine years on the board of the Academy of Management Journal and eleven years with the Academy of Management Executive. He and R. Edward Freeman guest-edited special issues on stakeholder themes at both of those journals.

Dr. Harrison's research interests include strategic management and business ethics, with particular expertise in the areas of stakeholder theory and corporate strategy. Much of his work has been published in prestigious academic journals such as Academy of Management Journal, Strategic Management Journal, Long Range Planning, and Journal of Business Ethics. He has authored or co-authored numerous books, including Managing for Stakeholders; Foundations of Strategic Management, 5th ed.; Strategic Management of Organizations and Stakeholders; Competing for Advantage; and Mergers and Acquisitions: A Guide to Creating Value for Stakeholders.

Dr. Harrison has also provided consulting and executive training services to dozens of companies on a wide range of strategic, entrepreneurial, and other business issues. E-mail: harrison@richmond.edu.

DIMA JAMALI is a professor in the School of Business at the American University of Beirut and the chair of the Management, Marketing and Entrepreneurship track. She holds a PhD in social policy and administration from the University of Kent at Canterbury, UK. Her research/teaching revolves primarily around corporate social responsibility (CSR). She is the author of over forty international publications focusing on different aspects of CSR in the Middle East, all appearing in highly reputable journals including British Journal of Management, Corporate Governance: An International Review, Journal of Business Ethics, and Business Ethics Quarterly. Dr. Jamali's research record has won her a number of scientific awards and honors, including the Abdul Hameed Shoman Award for Best Young Arab Researcher for the year 2010, Best Paper Awards at the Irish Academy of Management (2011) and the American Academy of Management (2012 and 2008), British Academy of Management Fellowship for South Asia and Middle East (2007), and the Best Paper Award by North American Case Research Association (2003). She worked as an expert consultant for the United Nations on Social Policy and CSR as well as various projects funded by the World Bank, the US Agency for International Development, NGOs, and other local public and private firms. E-mail: dj00@aub.edu.lb.

CHARLOTTE M. KARAM is an assistant professor of organizational behavior at the Olayan School of Business, American University of Beirut, Lebanon. Her research interests fall broadly within the area of International Management and include a cross-cultural examination of organizational behavior constructs at the individual and unit levels of analysis. She focuses on developing indigenous models to examine organizational citizenship behavior, ethical leadership, corporate social responsibility and gender within the Arab Middle East. Currently, her research focuses on the meaning and applicability of ethical leadership within the region, the current status of women at work within the Arab world, as well as what the private sector

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

can do for regional development through their CSR initiatives. Her publications have appeared in Journal of International Management, International Journal of Intercultural Relations, International Journal of Human Resource Management, International Journal of Conflict Management, and Asia Pacific Journal of Management. E-mail: ck16@aub.edu.lb.

Sue Newell is the Cammarata Professor of Management at Bentley University in Waltham, Massachusetts, and professor of information management at Warwick University in the United Kingdom. Sue was a founding members of ikon (Innovation, Knowledge and Organizational Networking Research Centre), reflecting her research focus on exploring innovation processes using knowledge and organizational networking perspectives. She has published over ninety journal articles including articles in Human Relations, Organization Studies, Long Range Planning, Management Learning, Journal of Management Studies, British Journal of Management, Information Systems Journal, Journal of Strategic Information Systems, and Journal of Information Technology. E-mail: snewell@bentley.edu.

Yusuf Munir Sidani is associate professor of leadership and business ethics at the Suliman S. Olayan School of Business, American University of Beirut (AUB). His research interests include work values, business ethics, corporate social responsibility, and cross-cultural management behavior. His publications appeared in several prestigious journals including Journal of Social Psychology, Journal of Business Ethics, and International Journal of Human Resource Management. He has co-authored Management (Arab World edition, Prentice Hall, 2011) and co-edited CSR in the Middle East (Palgrave Macmillan, 2012) in addition to numerous book chapters. His consulting and training experience has included various institutions in management, strategy, fraud prevention, leadership, and related topics. E-mail: yusuf.sidani@aub.edu.lb.

Jeffery Smith is associate professor of business ethics and Director of the Banta Center for Business, Ethics and Society at the University of Redlands. He is also adjunct professor of ethics at the Keck Graduate Institute for Applied Life Sciences. Professor Smith's current research examines the normative foundations of corporate social responsibility and has appeared in journals such as Business Ethics Quarterly and Ethical Theory and Moral Practice. E-mail: Jeffery_Smith@redlands.edu.

Richard A. Spinello is an associate research professor in the Carroll School of Management at Boston College where he teaches courses on ethics, social issues in management, and corporate strategy. Prior to joining the faculty of Boston College he worked as a consultant and product manager in the software industry. He has written and edited nine books on applied ethics and related areas, including CyberEthics: Morality and Law in Cyberspace and A Defense of Intellectual Property Rights (with Maria Bottis). Dr. Spinello has also written numerous articles and scholarly papers on ethics and public policy that have appeared in journals such as Business Ethics Quarterly, Ethics and Information Technology, and the Journal of Information Ethics. E-mail: richard.spinello@bc.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323111 Published online by Cambridge University Press

JON BARTON THORNBERRY is a lecturer in the Olayan School of Business at the American University of Beirut. Previously he was on the faculty of the business school at the American University in Cairo. He received his PhD from the University of Texas at Dallas and a BA in history from the University of Texas at Austin. He was an accountant in the private sector for many years and was a CPA. His research interests include business ethics in the developing world and cultural barriers to development. He has been published in the Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of Business Ethics Education, and Enterprise and Society. E-mail: jt09@aub.edu.lb.

ANDREW C. WICKS is the Ruffin Professor of Business Administration at the University of Virginia's Darden School of Business. He is director of the Olsson Center for Ethics, director of the doctoral program, academic advisor for the Business Roundtable Institute for Corporate Ethics and an adjunct professor in the Religious Studies department at UVA.

Wicks is co-author of three books including Managing for Stakeholders: Survival, Reputation and Success (Yale University Press, 2007); Business Ethics: A Managerial Approach (Prentice Hall, 2010); and Stakeholder Theory: The State of the Art (Cambridge University Press, 2010. He has published over thirty journal articles, and his work has appeared in a wide variety of journals in business ethics, management, and the humanities.

His research interests include stakeholder responsibility, stakeholder theory, trust, health care ethics, total quality management, and ethics and entrepreneurship. He works with MBA students, executives, and corporations in the United States and abroad. Wicks is actively working with Ethics-LX, an entrepreneurial venture, to create a series of web-based simulations that incorporate ethics into the functional areas of business. He has received awards for both his research and his teaching.

Wicks joined the Darden faculty in 2002 after teaching for ten years at the University of Washington Graduate Business School. E-mail: wicksa@darden.virginia.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201323111 Published online by Cambridge University Press