https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781413000303 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Contributors, October 2013 (12.4)

James Higgins teaches at Lehigh University and Cedar Crest College. His publications include "'With every accompaniment of ravage and agony': Pittsburgh and the Influenza Epidemic of 1918–1919," in the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography. His book on memory and urban communities' experiences during the epidemic is in press with the University of Rochester Press.

Kathryn Allamong Jacob is curator of manuscripts at the Schlesinger Library at the Radcliffe Institute at Harvard University. Her most recent book is King of the Lobby: The Life and Times of Sam Ward (2010).

Bruce A Kimball is a professor in the Department of Educational Studies at Ohio State University. Having studied the history of liberal education, professions, and professional education, he is now examining the emergence of cost escalation and changes in financial practices and thinking in American higher education in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. He is also co-authoring a two-volume history of Harvard Law School with Daniel R. Coquillette.

Melissa R. Klapper is a professor of history at Rowan University. She is the author of Jewish Girls Coming of Age in America, 1860–1920 (2005), Small Strangers: The Experiences of Immigrant Children in the United States, 1880–1925 (2007), and Ballots, Babies, and Banners of Peace: American Jewish Women's Activism, 1890–1940 (2013).

Katherine D. Moran is an assistant professor of transnational American studies at St. Louis University. She specializes in the intersection of modern U.S. religious and cultural history. Her current book project is entitled Imagining God's Country: Catholicism, Nation, Empire, and the Making of Modern America, 1870–1920.

Jacqueline M. Moore is a professor of history at Austin College and the author of several books including Cow Boys and Cattle Men: Class and Masculinity on the Texas Frontier, 1865–1900, which won the 2010

T. R. Fehrenbach Book Award. She is also co-editor of Rowman and Littlefield's African American History Series.

Michael Perman is professor emeritus at the University of Illinois at Chicago. His most recent books are Struggle for Mastery: Disfranchisement in the South, 1888–1908 (2001), Pursuit of Unity: A Political History of the American South (2009), and The Southern Political Tradition (2012).

Joshua Specht, a graduate student at Harvard University, received his B.A. from the College of William and Mary in 2003. He is currently finishing his dissertation on the consolidation of the U.S. ranching and meat-packing industries during the late nineteenth century.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781413000303 Published online by Cambridge University Press