Call for Papers

Rethinking Regionalism in the History of Education: Perspectives from the North American West

The incoming editors of History of Education Quarterly invite submissions for a special issue devoted to reimagining the history of education from the perspective of the North American West, including work that is transnational and/or trans-Pacific in scope and focus. Possible topics include, but are not limited to: Education and land policy; Aboriginal and Indigenous education; education in the borderlands of the U.S., Canada, and Mexico; Pacific immigration, colonialism, and influence on education and culture; urban education, rural education, and/or efforts to model progressivism in the urban or rural West; education and the construction of an imperial nation; education and reconstructions of race in a multiracial context; the history of youth and childhood in the West; community-based education and/or education as a social movement in the West; the University and western society; and education and the West in popular culture. The deadline for submissions is August 15, 2015. Questions and suggestions should be sent to incoming editors Nancy Beadie and Joy Williamson-Lott at heqedit@uw.edu.

The History of Education Quarterly is an international, peer-reviewed academic journal dedicated to publishing high-quality scholarship in the history of education. It is the official journal of the leading professional society in the field in the United States, the History of Education Society, and has been published since 1960.

The journal encourages submissions from a range of intersecting subfields in social, political, economic, intellectual, and cultural history, including (but not limited to):

Urban History
Policy History
Sociology of Knowledge
Colonialism and Colonial Education
History of Childhood and Youth
Gender Studies
Ethnic History
Indigenous Education
Cultural Studies
Comparative History
