Review of International Studies (2009), 35, 1–3 Copyright © British International Studies Association
doi:10.1017/S0260210509008407

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Rick Fawn is Senior Lecturer in International Relations at the University of St Andrews, and an Associate Editor of the Review of International Studies. His publications include several books on aspects of International Relations, including on responses to international crises such as The Iraq War: Causes and Consequences (co-edited with Raymond Hinnebusch, 2006), and on post-communist European politics, nationalism and regional security and cooperation, such as Ideology and National Identity in Post-communist Foreign Policies (as editor, 2003). Recent articles have appeared in such journals as Cambridge Review of International Affairs, Communist and Post-Communist Studies, Europe-Asia Studies and International Affairs.

David A. Lake is professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego. He received his Ph.D. from Cornell University in 1984 and taught at UCLA for nine years before coming to UCSD in 1992. Lake has published widely in international relations theory, international political economy, and international security studies. He is presently completing a book on Hierarchy in International Relations: Authority, Sovereignty, and the New Structure of World Politics. In addition to over fifty scholarly articles, he is the author of Power, Protection, and Free Trade: International Sources of U.S. Commercial Strategy, 1887–1939 (1988) and Entangling Relations: American Foreign Policy in its Century (1999) and co-editor of eight volumes including Governance in a Global Economy: Political Authority in Transition (2003) and Delegation and Agency in International Organizations (2006). Lake has served in numerous administrative posts, including Research Director for International Relations at the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (1992–1966 and 2000–2001), co-editor of the journal International Organization (1997–2001), chair of UCSD's Political Science department (2000–2004), and Associate Dean of Social Sciences at UCSD (Acting, 2006–2008). He is the current Vice President of the International Studies Association, Program Co-Chair of the 2007 Annual Meeting of the American Political Science Association, and founding chair of the International Political Economy Society. He is the recipient of the UCSD Chancellor's Associates Award for Excellence in Graduate Education (2005) and was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2006.

Emanuel Adler is the Andrea and Charles Bronfman Chair of Israeli Studies at the University of Toronto and the editor of International Organization. Previously, he was Professor of International Relations at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. The author of numerous books and articles, including The Power of Ideology (University of California Press, 1987); Progress in Postwar International Relations (Columbia University Press, 1991), edited with Beverly Crawford; Security Communities (Cambridge University Press, 1998), edited with Michael Barnett; Communitarian International Relations (Routledge, 2005); Convergence of Civilizations (2006), edited with Federica Bicchi, Beverly Crawford, and Raffaella Del Sarto, and 'Seizing the Middle Ground: Constructivism in World Politics', European Journal of International Relations (1997) – he is best known for his contribution to the subjects of epistemic communities, security communities, and more generally, constructivism in International Relations. His latest projects deal with NATO as a community of practice, a turn to practice in world politics, contemporary strategic social traps involving deterrence and self restraint, and the question whether there is a rational solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0260210509008407 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Patricia Greve is a doctoral candidate in Political Science at the University of Toronto. She is currently writing a dissertation on the internal dynamics of longstanding alliances and security communities like the transatlantic alliance. She has published on neoconservative politics and US foreign policy (TECTUM/ Marburg, 2005, in German). She holds an M.A. (Diplom) in political science and history from the University of Hamburg.

Benjamin Miller is an Associate Professor of International Relations at the University of Haifa. He was previously a Visiting Professor at the Department of Political Science at Duke University, a tenured member of the department of International Relations at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and a Research Fellow at Harvard, MIT and Princeton University. A second and expanded edition of When Opponents Cooperate: Great Power Conflict and Collaboration in World Politics (Ann Arbor, Michigan: The University of Michigan Press) was published in 2002 and States, Nations, and the Great Powers: The Sources of Regional War and Peace (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press) was published in 2007.

Anssi Paasi has been a Professor of Geography at the University of Oulu, Finland, since 1989. He is also an Honorary Professor of Human Geography at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth. He has started a five year full-time research post as an Academy Professor at the Academy of Finland in January 2008. He has published extensively in international journals and book collections on regional theory, regionalism and region-building processes. He has also theorised and studied empirically political boundaries and spatial identities. His books include Territories, Boundaries and Consciousness (1996).

Ann Capling is Professor of Political Science at the University of Melbourne and President of the Australian Political Studies Association. Her recent books include Australia and the Global Trade System: From Havana to Seattle (2001) and All the Way with the USA: Australia, the US and Free Trade (2005). In 2007 she was a member of the Warwick Commission on the future of the multilateral trade system.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0260210509008407 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Kim Richard Nossal is Sir Edward Peacock Professor of International Relations, Department of Political Studies, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, Canada. He is the author of The Politics of Canadian Foreign Policy (1997), co-editor with Nelson Michaud of Diplomatic Departures: The Conservative Era in Canadian Foreign Policy, 1984–93 (2001), and the co-author, with Stéphane Roussel and Stéphane Paquin, of Politique internationale et défense au Canada et au Québec (2007).

Diana Tussie directs the Department of International Relations at the Argentine Campus of the Latin American School of Social Sciences- FLACSO. She is the Founding Director of the Latin American Trade Network (LATN). She has published extensively on the political economy of trade relations and sits on the editorial boards of journals such as Global Governance, Progress in Development Studies, and Review of International Studies. In 2007 she was a member of the Warwick Commission on the future of the multilateral trade system.

John Ravenhill is Professor of International Relations in the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University. His current research focuses on the proliferation of preferential trade agreements, and on the automotive industry in East Asia. His recent publications include the second edition of Global Political Economy (Oxford University Press, 2008) and (co-edited with Andrew J. MacIntyre and T. J. Pempel), Crisis as Catalyst: Asia's Dynamic Political Economy. (Cornell University Press, 2008).

James J. Hentz is Professor and Chair of the Department of International Studies and Political Science at the Virginia Military Institute. He has contributed articles to journals and edited volumes, including Political Science Quarterly, Journal of Commonwealth and Comparative Politics, the Journal of Modern African Studies, and Defense and Security Analysis. He is the co-editor of New and Critical Security and Regionalism: Beyond the Nation State (2003), editor of Obligation of Empire: U.S. Grand Strategy for a New Century (2004), and author of South Africa and the Logic of Regional Cooperation (Indiana University Press, 2005). He is editor-in-chief of the Taylor & Francis/Routledge journal, African Security. In 1993/4 he was a visting scholar at Rand Afrikaans University (Johannesburg); in 2003 he was a visiting Fulbright Scholar at the Miklós Zrínyi National Defense University, Hungary, and Duignan Distinguished Visiting Fellow, Stanford University's Hoover Institute, Summer 2007. Dr Hentz won the 2007 Outstanding Faculty Award for the State of Virginia, from the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia.

Paul Kubicek is Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science at Oakland University. He teaches classes in Russian, European, and Middle Eastern politics, and has written extensively on post-Soviet states, the European Union, and Turkish politics. His most recent book is Organized Labor in Post-Communist States: From Solidarity to Infirmity (2004) and his current research is focused on the political economy of reform in post-Orange Revolution Ukraine.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0260210509008407 Published online by Cambridge University Press