European Journal of Political Research 61: 853, 2022
doi: 10.1111/1475-6765.12543

Corrigendum

In [1], the following error was published on page 566. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-6765.12462

Introduction

Unlike other parts of the world, in Western Europe the evidence of society's increasingly low reliance on supranational beliefs, matched by a dwindling proportion of churchgoers, is so strong that current academic debates do not revolve around the existence of secularisation but, rather, around its causes and actual significance (Norris & Inglehart 2004: 83−110).

The text was incorrect and should have read:

Introduction

Unlike other parts of the world, in Western Europe the evidence of society's increasingly low reliance on supernatural beliefs, matched by a dwindling proportion of churchgoers, is so strong that current academic debates do not revolve around the existence of secularisation but, rather, around its causes and actual significance (Norris & Inglehart 2004: 83−110).

We apologize for this error.

Reference

Gomez, R. (2022). When the chickens come home to roost: The long-term impact of party positions on religious voting. European Journal of Political Research 61(2): 566–585. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-6765.12462

© 2022 European Consortium for Political Research.

https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-6765.12543 Published online by Cambridge University Press