and one of America's most prominent political dissidents, will deliver an address on "Wars on Terror." Sponsored by the Organized Section on Human Rights, Chomsky was selected for this plenary to bring more focus on human rights violations as a global concern and to bring the issue home by pointing to the violations within the United States and to the international influence of the United States. The Organized Sections on New Political Science and Ecological and Transformational Politics are cosponsoring and coorganizing the event.

More Online

Your best resource for 2002 APSA Annual Meeting information is APSAnet <www.apsanet.org>. Log on to find all the details necessary for the meeting. Including:

- meeting preregistration. register securely online.
- hotel reservations. reserve your room with the online Passkey system.
- airline reservations. the Associations official travel agency, Stellar Access, offers an online reservation system.
- child care. sign up for KiddieCorp.
- PROceedings. gain access to the Annual Meeting papers for 2002.
- dining guide. find out where all the dining hot spots are in Boston.

Preliminary Program. take advantage of our new advanced online preliminary program. This dynamic program will be updated daily and contain the most current information on participants and panels.

Mayhew and Heclo to Deliver Award Lectures

The 2002 Annual Meeting will feature addresses by David Mayhew of Yale University and Hugh Heclo of George Mason University. Committee chairs of the three-member James Madison and three-member John Gaus award committees made their annoucements in early Spring.

Mayhew has been named winner of the 2002 James Madison Award and will deliver the James Madison Lecture on Friday, August 30, at 12:30 pm. The award recognizes an American political scientist who has made a distinguished scholarly contributions to political science. The award, given triennially, is one of the Association's highest honors.

Mayhew is Sterling Professor of Political Science at Yale University. His research addresses U.S. legislative behavior, U.S. political parties, and U.S. policymaking and has resulted in publication of numerous books, including the seminal work, Congress: The Electoral Connection. A former APSA Congressional Fellow, he has been a Guggenheim Fellow, a Hoover National Fellow, a Sherman Fairchild Fellow at the California Institute of Technology, a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, and is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Madison Award was first given in 1978 and winners have included leaders in the discipline such as Robert Dahl, Gabriel Almond, and Herbert Simon.

Hugh Heclo, Clarence J. Robinson Professor of Public Affairs at George Mason University, has been named the 2002 John Gaus Distinguished Lecturer and will deliver the seventeenth Gaus Lecture on Friday, August 30, at 5:30 pm.

An expert on American democratic institutions, as well as the international development of modern welfare states, Heclo has received national awards for his books including Comparative Public Policy; A Government of Strangers: Executive Politics in Washington; and Modern Social Politics in Britain and Sweden. Heclo is an elected member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and has served in the White House and as a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution. He chaired the Ford Foundation research advisory committee, which published The Common Good: Social Welfare and the American Future.

The John Gaus Award honors a lifetime of exemplary scholarship in the joint tradition of political science and public administration, and, more generally, recognizes achievement and encourages scholarship in public administration. It was first awarded in 1996.

Both Mayhew and Heclo will be presented with their awards at the Association's Awards Ceremony on Thursday, August 29, at 8:30 pm.

For more information on these prizes and to read previous lectures, visit APSAnet <www.apsanet.org>.

New: Voting Behavior: The 2000 Election

APSA is pleased to announce the release of Voting Behavior: The 2000 Election by Charles Prysby and Carmine Scavo.

Voting Behavior: The 2000 Election is a new SETUPS (Supplemental Empirical Teaching Units in Political Science) that offers an accessible dataset drawn from the American National Election Study of the 2000 presidential election. Charles Prysby and Carmine Scavo—authors of SETUPS on the 1984, 1988, 1992, and 1996 presidential elections and the SETUPS that examines American Voting Behavior over 20 years ago— developed this new SETUPS to give faculty and students access to the major scholarly survey of attitudes, attributes, and vote choice in the 2000 national election. The Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research has collaborated with APSA since 1974 to develop and sustain the distribution of SETUPS.

Copies of the guidebook can be ordered online <www.apsanet.org/pubs>. The accompanying dataset is available for free, online from the ICPSR web site <www.icpsr.umich.edu> to faculty from ICPSR member campuses and on CD-ROM by request to faculty from non-ICPSR member institutions. Faculty may upload the data to their institutions intranet to share among students.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096502000653 Published online by Cambridge University Press