EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES IN LINGUISTICS

In posting the job announcements below, we remind readers that job discrimination is illegal. The Linguistic Society of America thus retains the right to refuse or edit all discriminatory statements from copy sent to the Secretariat for publication in Language that are not in consonance with the principles of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The Executive Committee of the LSA hopes that all the job announcements will facilitate open hiring on the basis of merit to the advantage of all.

The LSA accepts listings from academic institutions under censure by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP). However, these listings are identified in this publication by (*) preceding position openings in order to advise applicants that the employing institution or its administration has been censured by the AAUP and that further information may be obtained on the situation from the AAUP.

Indiana University Bloomington: The Department of East Asian Languages & Cultures in the School of Global and International Studies invites applications for a tenure-track position as assistant professor in Japanese Language Studies. The fields of possible specialization include, but are not limited to, language education, second language studies, and linguistics broadly defined. The appointment begins August 1, 2016. Candidates must have Ph.D. at the time of appointment. The successful candidate will have a productive research record with clear potential for scholarly excellence, as well as a strong commitment to language teaching. She or he will also demonstrate a commitment to research, teaching, and program development within the Department of East Asian Languages & Cultures, as well as the School of Global and International Studies. Required qualifications include native or near-native proficiency in Japanese and English, and the ability to oversee the department's Japanese language program and represent its interests within and beyond the institution. Teaching responsibilities will include one level of the Japanese-language sequence and undergraduate and graduate courses in support of the department's language and culture curriculum. Indiana University is an equal employment and affirmative action employer and a provider of ADA services. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to age, ethnicity, color, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation or identity, national origin, disability status, or protected veteran status.

Application materials, including a cover letter that includes a statement of the candidate's research interests and teaching philosophy, curriculum vitae, teaching evaluations, a writing sample, and three academic letters of reference, should be submitted online at http://indiana.peopleadmin.com/postings/#. Questions regarding the position or application process can be directed to Japanese Search Committee, Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures, GISB 2035, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN 47405-7005 or electronically at ealc@indiana.edu. Review of applications will begin October 30, 2015, and will continue until the position is filled.

University of California, Santa Barbara: The Linguistics Department of the University of California, Santa Barbara, seeks to hire a distinguished scholar to hold the North Hall Endowed Chair in the Linguistics of African America. This position is the first of four interdisciplinary endowed chairs in African American studies. Pending final approval of the Presidential Chair, the appointment will be at the Associate Professor or Professor level, with tenure, effective July 1, 2016.

We seek applications from researchers in any subfield of linguistics specializing in any of the linguistic varieties of Africa and the diaspora that are spoken within the United States; we also welcome applications from scholars working on Black language elsewhere in the Americas, particularly if their research has a connection to the US context. Applicants must have national or international stature within their field and a distinguished record of scholarship and publication. Further requirements for the position include (1) an ability to forge interdisciplinary scholarly connections and lead new collaborative initiatives, including as part of the cluster of North Hall Endowed Chair positions, and (2) a commitment to the academic mentoring of African American undergraduate and graduate students as well as students from other groups underrepresented within linguistics and the academy generally. An additional strong desideratum is a substantive engagement with issues of social equity based on speakers' linguistic background, community, and/or identity, through applied research with social justice goals, collaborative partnerships with and for the benefit of Black communities, and/or activist or advocacy efforts on behalf of Black communities.

Ph.D. in linguistics or a related field is required. To ensure full consideration, all application materials should be received by Friday, January 15, 2016. The position will remain open until filled. All application materials must be submitted via the UC Recruit online application system at: https://recruit.ap.ucsb.edu/apply/JPF00628. For more information about the position, the application process, and the department's program and initiatives, visit www.linguistics.ucsb.edu. Inquiries may be addressed to the Search Committee Chair, Professor Mary Bucholtz, at northhallsearch@linguistics.ucsb.edu.

Our department has a genuine commitment to diversity and is especially interested in candidates who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the academic community through research, teaching, and service. The University of California is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer, and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law.

The 5th Institute on Collaborative Language Research (CoLang) will be held at the University of Alaska Fairbanks in 2016. The institute is an opportunity for community language activists and linguists to receive training together in community-based language documentation and revitalization. This institute attracts a diverse range of participants from around the globe. Instructors include many of the world's leading experts in language documentation.
