NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Terry L. Besser is a professor of sociology at Iowa State University. Professor Besser's research efforts have been directed toward studying organizations, work, and the relationship between businesses and communities. Most recently she completed a book on corporate social responsibility. She is currently working on a national study of businesses and communities and another study about economic shocks and communities. Besser teaches introduction to sociology, graduate and undergraduate research methods classes, and courses related to the sociology of organizations and the economy. E-mail: tbesser@iastate.edu.

John R. Boatright is the Raymond C. Baumhart, S.J., Professor of Business Ethics in the Graduate School of Business at Loyola University Chicago. He served five years as the executive director of the Society for Business Ethics, and is a past president of the Society. He is the author of the books Ethics and the Conduct of Business and Ethics in Finance. He received his PhD in philosophy from the University of Chicago. E-mail: jboatri@luc.edu.

Kevin Gibson is an associate professor in the departments of philosophy and management at Marquette University, where he is the director of its Center for Ethics Studies. He is the author of Business and Ethics: An Introduction (Cambridge University Press 2007) and Business Ethics: People, Profits and the Planet (McGraw-Hill, 2005), and numerous articles on applied ethics. His current research project examines business attitudes to sustainability and the difficulty of valuing intangible goods such as heritage and sacred objects. He is on the editorial board of the Journal of Business Ethics. E-mail: Kevin.Gibson@Marquette.edu.

Stewart W. Herman is associate professor of religion at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minnesota, and executive director of the Society of Christian Ethics. E-mail: herman@cord.edu.

Jean L. Johnson is professor of marketing strategy at the University of Amsterdam Business School. Her research interests include interfirm marketing relationships, firm culture as relating to marketing strategy, interfirm learning, new products and innovation, and international strategic alliances. She has published in the Journal of Marketing, Academy of Management Journal, Decision Science, Journal of Retailing, and Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, among others. E-mail: j.l.johnson@uva.nl.

Ann Kent began her career as a China specialist in the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and in the Parliamentary Research Service of the Australian Commonwealth Parliament. She subsequently became an Australian Research Council Fellow in the Faculty of Law, Australian National University, Canberra, and is currently a visiting fellow in the ANU College of Law. She is the author of Beyond Compliance: China, International Organizations and Global Security (Stanford University Press, 2007); China, the United Nations and Human Rights: The Limits of Compliance (Pennsylvania University Press, 1999); and Between Freedom and

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121333 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Subsistence: China and Human Rights (Oxford University Press, 1993). E-mail: ann.kent@anu.edu.au.

THOMAS B. LAWRENCE is the Weyerhaeuser Professor of Change Management, and director of the CMA Centre for Strategic Change and Performance Measurement at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, Canada. He received his Ph.D. in organizational analysis from the University of Alberta. His research focuses on the dynamics of power, change, and institutions in organizations and organizational fields. It has appeared in such journals as Administrative Science Quarterly, Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Harvard Business Review, Sloan Management Review, Organization Studies, Journal of Management Studies, Human Relations, and the Journal of Management. He is a co-editor of the Sage Handbook of Organization Studies, second edition, and Institutional Work: Actors and Agency in Institutional Studies of Organization. E-mail: tblawren@sfu.ca.

KELLY D. MARTIN is assistant professor of marketing at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. Her research interests involve marketing ethics and firm strategy, consumer welfare, and the role of social institutions and culture in corruption. Her work has appeared in journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, the Journal of Public Policy & Marketing, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Business & Society, among others. E-mail: kelly.martin@business.colostate.edu.

NANCY J. MILLER holds the Burlington Professorship in the Department of Consumer, Apparel, and Retail Studies at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Her research efforts focus on discovering and measuring factors that affect the rural community marketplace. Her research has been published in the International Journal of Entrepreneurship and Innovation, Journal of Small Business Strategy, Qualitative Market Research, and the Journal of Small Business Management. Dr. Miller has served as associate editor for the Clothing and Textiles Research Journal, and currently serves as the vice president of publications for the International Textiles and Apparel Association (2009–2012). She teaches entrepreneurship and economics of the global apparel industry to undergraduate and graduate students. E-mail: njmiller@uncg.edu.

MARC ORLITZKY (Ph.D., University of Iowa) is associate professor of management at The Pennsylvania State University Altoona. Previously, he served on the faculties of the University of New South Wales (UNSW) and University of Auckland (Senior Lecturer Above the Bar) and, in 2007–2008, was a visiting research fellow at the ICCSR at the University of Nottingham Business School. He served or serves on the editorial review boards of several publications, including Academy of Management Journal, Issues in Social and Environmental Accounting, Journal of Management Control, and the Sage Encyclopedia of Business Ethics and Society. He co-authored (with D. L. Swanson) the book Toward Integrative Corporate Citizenship: Research Advances in Corporate Social Performance and co-edited (with J. Moon and G. Whelan) Corporate Governance and Business Ethics. E-mail: moo3@psu.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121333 Published online by Cambridge University Press

AMIT SAINI is associate professor of marketing at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He conducts research in the area of marketing strategy, business-to-business marketing, and marketing ethics. He has presented papers at major conferences, and his research appears in the Journal of Marketing, Marketing Letters, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, Journal of Business Ethics, and Academy of Marketing Science Review. His industry experience includes sales management and quantitative market research. E-mail: asaini@unlnotes.unl.edu.

MARGUERITE SCHNEIDER received her Ph.D. in organization management from Rutgers University. She is associate professor of management at New Jersey Institute of Technology and a visiting associate professor and acting department chair at York College, City University of New York. Dr. Schneider is also a research fellow of the Corporate Governance Institute at San Diego State University and a member of the graduate faculty at Rutgers University. She has been an officer of the Eastern Academy of Management, is Treasurer of the International Association for Business and Society, and serves on several journal editorial boards. Prior to her academic career, Dr. Schneider worked in corporate strategic planning within the financial services industry. Her research on governance, leadership, and public sector organizations has been published in journals including Organization Science, Academy of Management Review, Administration & Society, British Journal of Management, and The Leadership Quarterly. E-mail: mschneid@adm.njit.edu.

MASOUD SHADNAM is assistant professor of management and strategy at Rouen Business School in Rouen, France. He received his Ph.D. in management and organization studies from Simon Fraser University. His research draws on sociology and social theory, and focuses on studying morality and moral phenomena in organizations. He is currently working on exploring the dynamics and politics of moral discourse in large organizations. E-mail: msh@rouenbs.fr.

DIANE L. SWANSON is the von Waaden Business Administration Professor at Kansas State University. She currently serves on the editorial boards of Business Ethics Quarterly, Academy of Management Review, and Business & Society. She is the co-editor of the books Advancing Business Ethics Education and Toward Assessing Business Ethics Education and co-authored the book Toward Integrative Corporate Citizenship. She received her Ph.D. in business from the University of Pittsburgh. E-mail: swanson@ksu.edu.

ALIX VALENTI is an associate professor of legal studies and management in the School of Business at the University of Houston-Clear Lake. Dr. Valenti holds a Ph.D. in management from the University of Texas at Dallas and a J.D. from St. John's University School of Law. She is a member of the Academy of Management and the Southern Association of Legal Studies in Business, and is an officer of the Southwest Academy of Management. Prior to becoming a faculty member at the university, Dr. Valenti was a senior consultant with a global human resource consulting firm, specializing in employee benefits, employment law, and executive compensation. Dr. Valenti's research interests include corporate governance, intraorganizational networks, and employee rights. E-mail: valenti@uhcl.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201121333 Published online by Cambridge University Press