ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It is a pleasure to express my gratitude to all those who have helped me in this work. In particular I wish to thank Yale University for the grant of a Junior Sterling Fellowship, which made it possible for me to devote the year to study.

My thanks are due to Professor Johannes Rahder for his counsel in selecting the material and for his generous assistance in supplying historical background and in interpreting troublesome forms.

The study owes a great deal to Professor Bernard Bloch, whose stimulating and creative direction lightened the work and whose clear-sighted approach often guided me through forests of detail.

I am also deeply indebted to the members of the Japanese Department, without whose cooperation this study could not have been made. To Mr. Kentaro Ikeda, Mr. Senzo Usui, Mrs. Miyo Okada, and Mr. Stanley Okada my thanks for their aid and patience.
