NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

John B. Bingham is an associate professor of organizational leadership and strategy and Donald L. Staheli Fellow at the Marriott School of Management, Brigham Young University. He received his Ph.D. from Mays Business School at Texas A&M University. He studies employee attachment and exchange, intangible inducements, social responsibility, and unethical behavior. E-mail: johnbingham@byu.edu.

John Douglas Bishop is a professor in the business administration program at Trent University, Peterborough, Ontario. He obtained his MBA in finance from McMaster University (1985) and his Ph.D. in moral philosophy from the University of Edinburgh (1979). He worked for multinational computer corporations for several years. He has published in Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics, Journal of the History of Ideas, and the Canadian Journal of Philosophy. He is the editor of Ethics and Capitalism (University of Toronto Press, 2000). His current research interests are the rights of for-profit corporations, ethics and economic theory, and corporate capitalism and sustainability. E-mail: jbishop@trentu.ca.

Angelo Carlo S. Carrascoso is assistant professor of business ethics at the University of Redlands School of Business, and director of the Banta Center for Business, Ethics and Society. His research interests include ethics in small- to medium-sized enterprises, management and spirituality, stakeholder theory, and business ethics education. In 2009, he obtained his Ph.D. in business ethics at the Darden School of the University of Virginia. E-mail: Carlo_Carrascoso@redlands.edu.

Ronald F. Duska, Ph.D., is president of Duska Business Ethics Consulting, where he engages in business ethics consulting, lecturing, workshops, and developing and presenting continuing education programs. He is a member of the board and past president of the Society of Business Ethics, the publisher of Business Ethics Quarterly. Currently, he is an adjunct professor at St. Joseph's and Villanova Universities. From 1996 to 2011, he held the Charles Lamont Post Chair of Ethics and the Professions at The American College, where he co-founded and served as the director of the College's Center for Ethics as well as created The Mitchell Forum, which brings together chief executives and business ethicists. A professor emeritus at Rosemont College, he has taught at The Wharton School, The University of Virginia, Pennsylvania State University, and St. John's University. He is a senior fellow at the Olson Center of the University of Virginia and a senior fellow at the Pedro Arrupe Center for Business Ethics as St. Joseph's University. He is the author, co-author, and editor of numerous articles as well as several books, including Accounting Ethics (2nd edition); Business Ethics (2nd edition); Ethics for the Financial Services Professional; Contemporary Reflections on Business Ethics; Organizational Behavior in Insurance; The Next Phase of Business Ethics: Integrating Psychology and Ethics; Moral Development: A Guide to Piaget and Kohlberg; Ethics and Corporate Responsibility: Theory Cases and Dilemmas; and Education,

©2014 Business Ethics Quarterly 24:1 (January 2014); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 149–151
DOI: 10.5840/beq20142415

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq20142415 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Leadership, and Business Ethics: A Symposium in Honor of Clarence Walton. His web site is www.businessethicszone.com. E-mail: ronaldduska1@gmail.com.

R. EDWARD FREEMAN is University Professor, Elis and Signe Olsson Professor, Academic Director of the Business Roundtable Institute for Corporate Ethics, the Institute for Business in Society, and Senior Fellow of the Olsson Center for Applied Ethics at the University of Virginia Darden School of Business. His latest book is Stakeholder Theory: The State of the Art, published by Cambridge University Press in early 2010. In 2013 and in 2008 he received honorary doctorates (Doctor Honoris Causa) from Radboud University Nijmegen and Universidad Pontificia Comillas in Spain for his work on stakeholder theory and business ethics. E-mail: freemane@darden.virginia.edu.

JOSEPH P. GASPAR is currently an assistant professor in the School of Business at Quinnipiac University. His research focuses on deception in negotiations and ethical decision making in organizations. He received his Ph.D. in management and global business from Rutgers Business School—Newark and New Brunswick at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. E-mail: joseph.gaspar@quinnipiac.edu.

EUGENE HEATH is a professor of philosophy at the State University of New York, New Paltz. He has authored essays on Bernard Mandeville, Adam Ferguson, and Adam Smith, including "Adam Smith and Self-Interest," Oxford Handbook to Adam Smith (2013). He also edited, with V. Merolle, two volumes of essays on Ferguson (Pickering & Chatto, 2008 and 2009). Along with his textbook, Morality and the Market: Ethics and Virtue in the Conduct of Business (McGraw-Hill, 2002), he has published papers on the ethics of pensions and genetic commerce. He is a co-editor, with Byron Kaldis, of Wealth, Commerce, and Philosophy: Foundational Thinkers and Business Ethics (forthcoming, University of Chicago, 2015). E-mail: heathe@newpaltz.edu.

WILLIAM S. LAUFER is director of the Carol and Lawrence Zicklin Center for Business Ethics Research and the Julian Aresty Professor at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, where he is also professor of legal studies and business ethics, sociology, and criminology. Dr. Laufer writes about theories of corporate criminal liability and engages in research on corporate regulation and compliance. E-mail: lauferw@wharton.upenn.edu.

PETER M. MADSEN is an associate professor of organizational leadership and strategy at Brigham Young University's Marriott School of Management. He received his Ph.D. from U.C. Berkeley's Haas School of Business. His research focuses on organizational learning—particularly on how organizations and their members learn from failure and adapt to manage uncertainty and risk. Madsen also studies the interplay between financial objectives and non-financial objectives (particularly employee health and safety and environmental performance) in organizations. E-mail: petermadsen@byu.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq20142415 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Jeffrey Moriarty is associate professor and chair of the Philosophy Department at Bentley University. His research interests lie in business ethics and political philosophy, and at the intersection of these fields. He is especially interested in questions of distributive justice in state and organizational contexts. Publications to feature his work include Business & Society, Journal of Business Ethics, Noûs, and Philosophical Studies. He earned a Ph.D. in philosophy from Rutgers University. E-mail: jmoriarty@bentley.edu.

Joshua Preiss is an assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy and the Program in Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE) at Minnesota State University. His current research is in moral philosophy and public affairs, in particular, issues of justice and personal responsibility, multiculturalism, ethics and economics, and conceptions of political and economic freedom. His work has appeared in such journals as Public Affairs Quarterly, Social Theory and Practice, Ethics, Res Publica, and the Critical Review of International Social and Political Philosophy. E-mail: joshua.preiss@mnsu.edu.

Danielle E. Warren is an associate professor of management and global business at Rutgers Business School—Newark and New Brunswick of Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. She specializes in the study of constructive and destructive deviance, formal ethics training, moral emotions and workplace sanctions. She received her Ph.D. from The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. E-mail: dwarren@andromeda.rutgers.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq20142415 Published online by Cambridge University Press