https://doi.org/10.1017/S153778141400019X Published online by Cambridge University Press

Contributors, July 2014 (13.3)

Dirk Bönker is an associate professor of history at Duke University. He is the author of Militarism in a Global Age: Naval Ambitions in Germany and the United States before World War I (2012).

Faye E. Dudden is professor of history at Colgate University and author of Fighting Chance: The Struggle over Woman Suffrage and Black Suffrage in Reconstruction America (2011).

Robert D. Johnston is one of the new coeditors of the Journal of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era. He is author of The Radical Middle Class: Populist Democracy and the Question of Capitalism in Progressive Era Portland, Oregon (2003) as well as a number of historiographical articles on the Gilded Age and Progressive Era—most recently "The Possibilities of Politics: Democracy in America, 1877–1917," in Eric Foner and Lisa McGirr, eds., American History Now (2011).

Lawrence M. Lipin is a professor of history and environmental studies at Pacific University. His most recent book is Workers in the Wild: Conservation, Consumerism, and Labor in Oregon, 1910–30 (2007). He has published articles in Labor History, the Journal of Social History, and the Oregon Historical Quarterly.

Robert D. Miller received his PhD in history from the University of California, Riverside, in June 2011. He teaches history at California State University, San Marcos; San Diego Mesa College; and Citrus College. He is researching American Indian conceptions of the American empire—both overseas and domestic—at the turn of the twentieth century.

Nicole M. Phelps is associate professor of history at the University of Vermont and the author of U.S.-Habsburg Relations from 1815 to the Paris Peace Conference: Sovereignty Transformed (2013). She received her PhD in American and European history from the University of Minnesota in 2008 and won the Austrian Cultural Forum Dissertation Prize in 2010. She is the current president of the Alpha of Vermont chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Charles Postel is associate professor of history at San Francisco State University and author of The Populist Vision (2007). His research and writing focus on social movements and politics, ideas, and society in post-Civil War America.

Daniel T. Rodgers is Henry Charles Lea Professor of History emeritus at Princeton University. He is the author of The Work Ethic in Industrial America, 1850–1920 (1979); Contested Truths: Keywords in American Politics since Independence (1987); Atlantic Crossings: Social Politics in a Progressive Age (1998); and Age of Fracture (2011).

Catherine McNicol Stock is the Barbara Zaccheo Kohn '72 Professor in the Department of History at Connecticut College, where she also directs the American Studies program. She is the author of Main Street in Crisis: The Great Depression and the Old Middle Class on the Northern Plains (1992) and Rural Radicals: From Bacon's Rebellion to the Oklahoma City Bombing (1997). She is the coeditor, with Robert D. Johnston, of The Countryside in the Age of the Modern State: Political Histories of Rural America (2001).

Ann-Marie Szymanski is associate professor of political science at the University of Oklahoma. She is working on a book that explores the transformation of regulatory policy from the nineteenth to the twentieth century.

Ian Tyrrell is emeritus professor of history at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. He has written Reforming the World: The Creation of America's Moral Empire (2010) and Crisis of the Wasteful Nation: Empire and Conservation in Theodore Roosevelt's America, forthcoming from the University of Chicago Press.

Mary Whisner is reference librarian at the Gallagher Law Library of the University of Washington School of Law. Her publications include Practicing Reference: Thoughts for Librarians and Legal Researchers (2006), drawn from her column on legal research and reference work for Law Library Journal.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S153778141400019X Published online by Cambridge University Press