The Boundaries of Freedom

The Boundaries of Freedom brings together, for the first time in English, a group of key scholars whose work is helping to reconceive the social and cultural history of Brazilian slavery. Brazil was the largest and most enduring slave society in the Americas, with nearly five million enslaved Africans brought forcibly to its shores over four-and-a-half centuries. Slavery was integral to every aspect of its history. This book introduces English-language readers to a paradigm-shifting renaissance in Brazilian scholarship that has upended long-standing assumptions about slavery's relation to law, property, sexuality, and family; reconceived understandings of slave economies; and explored issues of agency, autonomy, identity, and freedom. These vibrant debates are explored in fifteen essays that emphasize the centrality of slavery, abolition, and Black subjectivity in the forging of modern Brazil and place the Brazilian experience in dialogue with the afterlives of slavery worldwide. Afro-Latin America

Series editors

George Reid Andrews, University of Pittsburgh
Alejandro de la Fuente, Harvard University

This series reflects the coming of age of the new, multidisciplinary field of Afro-Latin American Studies, which centers on the histories, cultures, and experiences of people of African descent in Latin America. The series aims to showcase scholarship produced by different disciplines, including history, political science, sociology, ethnomusicology, anthropology, religious studies, art, law, and cultural studies. It covers the full temporal span of the African Diaspora in Latin America, from the early colonial period to the present, and includes continental Latin America, the Caribbean, and other key areas in the region where Africans and their descendants have made a significant impact.
