APSA Recognizes Outstanding Career Accomplishments in Chicago

The Association honored 23 scholars for their career achievements and outstanding research at the Awards Ceremony and Luncheon, held as part of the Annual Meeting in Chicago. Hosted by 2004 Program Co-Chairs Atul Kohli and Anne Norton, the event began with a luncheon for the winners, their guests, and committee members, and was followed by a ceremony presenting 18 prizes. Complete citations on each award can be found in the Gazette section of this issue of PS.

The Association recognized four individuals for their major contributions to the profession and our understanding and practice of politics. The Association was pleased to honor Patricia W. Ingraham of Syracuse University with the John Gaus Award for a lifetime of exemplary scholarship in the joint traditions of political science and public administration. In conjunction with receiving the Gaus Award, Ingraham delivered the annual John Gaus lecture, titled "You Talking to Me? Accountability and the Public Service."

The Carey McWilliams Award, presented annually to an individual who has made a major journalistic contribution to the understanding of politics, was presented to one of today's foremost political commentators, Bill Moyers of Public Affairs Television for his contribution to the public's understanding of major social and political trends.

The Hubert H. Humphrey Award, presented each year in recognition of notable public service by a political scientist, was presented to The Honorable David Dreier, Representative of California. Congressman Dreier earned a Master's degree in American Government from Claremont Graduate University in 1976. Respected on both sides of the aisle, the Congressman is best known for his work on the historic 1995 congressional reform package that streamlined committee staff by one-third, made Congress compliant with all anti-discrimination and workplace safety laws, promoted fiscal responsibility through the use of honest budget numbers, eliminated proxy voting in all House committees, created term-limits for committee chairmen, and opened committee meetings to the public and press.

The Ithiel de Sola Pool Award, presented triennially to a scholar selected to explore the implications of research on issues of politics in a global society, went to Manuel Castells of the University of Southern California and the Universitat Oberta de Catalunya. In conjunction with receiving the award, Castells delivered the triennial Ithiel de Sola Pool address, entitled "Global Politics and Global Governance," which will appear in the January issue of PS.

Eight dissertation prizes were awarded to young scholars who had completed their doctoral studies in 2002 or 2003. The Gabriel A. Almond prize for the best dissertation in comparative politics was awarded to Daniel Ziblatt, Harvard University. Ziblatt completed "Constructing a Federal State: Political Development, Path Dependence, and the Origins of Federalism in Modern Europe, 1815–1871" under the direction of Kenneth Jowitt at the University of California, Berkeley.

The 2003 William Anderson Award for the best doctoral dissertation in the general field of federalism, intergovernmental relations, or state and local politics was awarded to Christopher Berry, Harvard University. Berry completed his dissertation, "Imperfect Union: Fiscal Externalities in Multi-Level Governments," under the direction of Mark Hansen at the University of Chicago.

Tamir Moustafa, University of Wisconsin, Madison, won the Edward S. Corwin award for "Law Versus the State: The Expansion of Constitutional Power in Egypt, 1980–2001." Joel Migdal of the University of Washington served as Staton's dissertation chair. The Corwin Award is given for the best doctoral dissertation in the field of public law.

The Harold D. Lasswell Award for the best dissertation in policy studies was presented to Suzanne Christine Nielsen of the U.S. Army for her work "Preparing for War: The Dynamics of Peacetime Military Reform." Nielsen completed her dissertation under the direction of Stephen Peter Rosen at Harvard University.

Helen M. Kinsella of the University of Minnesota received the Helen Dwight Reid Award for the best doctoral dissertation in international relations, law, and politics. Brooks wrote his dissertation, "The Image Before the Weapon: A Genealogy of the 'Civilian' in International Law and Politics," under the direction of Lisa Disch and Kathryn Sikkink, University of Minnesota.

The E. E. Schattschneider Award for the best dissertation in the field of American Politics was jointly presented to Jeremy David Bailey, Eastern Washington University, and David Campbell, University of Notre Dame. Bailey completed his dissertation, "Democratic Energy: Thomas Jefferson and the Development of Presidential Power," under the direction of Marc Landy, Boston College. Campbell competed his dissertation, "Participation in Context: How Communities and Schools Shape Civic Engagement," under the direction of Robert D. Putnam, Harvard University.

The Leonard D. White Award for best doctoral dissertation in the field of public administration was awarded jointly to Neal D. Woods of the University of South Carolina and Young Han Chun of Chung-Ang University. Woods' dissertation, entitled "Rethinking Regulation: Institutions and Interests in State Regulatory Enforcement," was completed under the direction of Edward T. Jennings of the University of Kentucky. Young's dissertation, "Goal Ambiguity in Public Organizations: Dimensions, Antecedents, and Comparisons" was overseen by Hal G. Rainey, University of Georgia.

The Leo Strauss Award, for the best doctoral dissertation completed and accepted in 2002 or 2003 in the field of political philosophy, was presented to Christina Tarnopolsky of Harvard University. She completed her dissertation, "Plato and the Politics of Shame," under the direction of Nathon Tarcov and Charles Larmore, University of Chicago.

Two awards were presented in the paper and article category in 2004. The Heinz Eulau Award for the best article published in the American Political Science Review during 2003 was given to Mary Hawkesworth of Rutgers University for her work "Congressional Enactments of Race-Gender: Toward a Theory of Raced-Gendered Institutions," published in the December issue.

The 2003 Franklin L. Burdette/Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper presented at last year's Annual Meeting, was given to Larry W. Chappell of Mississippi Valley State University and Bernard L. Bray of Talladega College for their work, "Civic Theatre for Civic Education."

Four book awards were also presented. Robert O. Self of the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee was awarded the Ralph Bunche Award for his book, American Babylon: Race and the Struggle for Postwar Oklahoma (Princeton University Press). The Bunche award is given for the year's best scholarly work in political science which explores the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism.

The Gladys M. Kammerer Award, given for the best political science publication in 2003 in the field of U.S. national policy, was awarded to Gerry Mackie of the University of Notre Dame for his work, Democracy Defended (Cambridge University Press) and to Peter W. Singer of the Brookings Institution for his book Corporate Warriors: The Rise of the Privatized Military Industry (Cornell University Press).

The 2004 Victoria Schuck Award, for the best book published in 2003 on women and politics, was awarded to Nancy J. Hirschmann of the University of Pennsylvania for The Subject of Liberty: Toward a Feminist Theory of Freedom (Princeton University Press).

The Purpose of Intervention: Changing Beliefs about the Use of Force (Cornell University Press), authored by Martha Finnemore of George Washington University, was named winner of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award. The prize is given for the best book published in 2003 on government, politics, or international affairs.

APSA will present 20 awards at the 2005 Annual Meeting in Washington. Nomination and submission information is available on the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org>.

New 2004-2005 APSA Officers Elected

Margaret Levi, the Jere L. Bachrach Professor of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Washington, Seattle, became the Association's 101st president on September 4th at the Association's Annual Business Meeting. Outgoing APSA President Susanne Rudolph of the University of Chicago presented Levi with the Association gavel, marking the second time in the Association's history that a standing woman president has passed the gavel to an incoming woman president. Joining Levi in guiding the Association are five new officers. Eight new members of the council will be elected in an all member electronic election during the month of October. Details on the results of the election will be available on the web and in the January issue of PS.

Levi earned her B.A. from Bryn Mawr College in 1968 and her Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1974, the year she joined the faculty of the University of Washington. She was formerly the Harry Bridges Chair and director of the Center for Labor Studies.

Levi has authored three books, including Of Rule and Revenue (University of California Press, 1988) and Consent, Dissent, and Patriotism (Cambridge University Press, 1997), and has co-edited five others. She is the joint author of Analytic Narratives (Princeton University Press, 1998). In progress is a coauthored volume with Karen Cook and Russell Hardin, building on a multi-year Russell Sage Foundation project on trust and trustworthiness. Concurrently, she is working on a range of issues having to do with labor unions and with global justice campaigns. Some of the work builds on the WTO History Project, which she co-directed, and some derives from joint research with David Olson on union democracy. She also continues to write on issues concerning the analytic narrative approach to the study of complex historical and comparative processes.

Previous APSA responsibilities include serving as vice-president, president of the Organized Section on Political Economy, as Annual Meeting Program co-chair with James Alt, on the Executive Council, and on the Civic Education Task Force. In 1999, she became the general editor of Cambridge Studies in Comparative Politics. She also is on the editorial boards of Politics & Society, the Annual Review of Political Science, Rationality and Society, and Political Studies. She has served on the board of the ICPSR and currently is on the boards of the Society for Comparative Research and of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences.

Assuming the position of president-elect is Ira Katznelson, the Ruggles Professor of Political Science and History at Columbia University where he received his B.A. in 1966 and first taught after completing his Ph.D. in history from Cambridge University in 1969. Before returning to Columbia in 1994, he was a member of the department of political science at the University of Chicago (where he was chair) and the New School for Social Research (where he was dean of the graduate faculty).

His scholarship at the boundary of political science and history on the liberal state, inequality, social knowledge, and institutions primarily concerns the United States, but is indebted, and seeks to contribute to, the discipline's other subfields. Katznelson is currently finishing a short book on affirmative action and a long volume on the New Deal. His most recent book is Desolation and Enlightenment: Political Knowledge after Total War, Totalitarianism, and the Holocaust (2003). Other books include: Black Men, White Cities (1973), City Trenches (1981), Schooling for All (with Margaret Weir, 1985), Marxism and the City (1992), and Liberalism's Crooked Circle (1996), which won the Michael Harrington and Lionel Trilling Book Awards. He also co-edited Working Class Formation (with Aristide Zolberg, 1986), Paths of Emancipation: Jews, States, and Citizenship (with Pierre Birnbaum, 1995), and Shaped by War and Trade: International Influences on American Political Development (with Martin Shefter, 2002).

He co-chaired, with Helen Milner, the APSA 2000 Program Committee and edited Political Science: The State of the Discipline, Centennial Edition (Norton Publishers, 2002). He has also served as president of the Politics and History Section of APSA, president of the Social Science History Association, and chair of the Russell Sage Foundation Board of Trustees. He has been a Guggenheim Fellow, and is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The other officers for 2004–2005 are:

Vice Presidents: Robert Axelrod, University of Michigan; John Garcia, University of Arizona; and Joan Tronto, Hunter College and the Graduate Center, CUNY

Treasurer: Henry Brady, University of California, Berkeley

Secretary: Christine Sierra, University of New Mexico
