Allan W. Atlas teaches at The Graduate Center of The City University of New York. His current research is focused largely on the role of the English concertina in Victorian England. Together with Julia Grella O'Connell (mezzo-soprano) and Francesco Izzo (pianist), he is a member of the New York Victorian Consort, which features the repertory of the Victorian salon.

Jonathan Del Mar is a conductor and musicologist who has published Urtext Editions with Bärenreiter of the complete Beethoven Symphonies (1996–2000) and Cello Sonatas (2004), and most recently the Elgar Cello Concerto (2005). He is currently working on the Beethoven String Quartets.

John Hughes is a Senior Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Gloucestershire. His recent research has been on the links between literary and philosophical writing, and the ways in which literary writers represent musical experience. He has written two books, Lines of Flight (Sheffield Academic Press, 1997), and 'Ecstatic Sound': Music and Individuality in the Work of Thomas Hardy (Ashgate, 2001).

Graham Hunt is currently Assistant Professor of Musicology/Music Theory at the University of Texas at Arlington. His research focuses on Wagner's Ring cycle and Strauss' lieder. He has published on Wagnerian analysis in Opera Quarterly and Wagner, and on Schenkerian/Transformational analysis of Strauss in Methodology of Music Research.

Natasha Loges is Deputy Head of Undergraduate Programmes at the Royal College of Music. She recently gained her PhD from the Royal Academy of Music, entitled 'Text and Context in Brahms's Lieder'. Research interests centre on the lied and nineteenth-century performance. Publications include 'The notion of personae in Brahms's Op.32 no.7: a literary key to musical performance?' in Music and Literature in German Romanticism (Camden House: April 2004).

Susan Youens, the J. W. Van Gorkom Professor of Music at the University of Notre Dame, is the author of eight books on the songs of Franz Schubert and Hugo Wolf. Her forthcoming book is entitled Heinrich Heine and the Lied: The Early Years, and she is currently working on two projects: A Social History of the Lied and Schubert's Unknown Poets.
