Membership and Subscription Rates

Individual members of the PSA receive a subscription to the journal. Membership rates for 2025 are tiered based on income and start at $36 print + electronic, $27 e-only. To join the PSA visit: https://philsci.org/membership.php. Institutional print + electronic and e-only subscription rates are tiered according to an institution's type and research output: £282/$392 to £577/$797 print + electronic, £203/$282 to £408/$565 e-only. Institutional print-only is £295/$405. Additional taxes may apply. Free or deeply discounted access is available for many institutions through Cambridge University Press's developing world country programme: https://www.cambridge.org/core/services/librarians/developing-country-programme. For additional rates, and any other subscription queries, please contact: journals@cambridge.org.

PSA PHILOSOPHY OF SCIENCE ASSOCIATION

PHILOSOPHY OF SCIENCE

Preface

This special issue of the journal Philosophy of Science presents a curated selection of the contributed papers from the 2024 biennial meeting of the Philosophy of Science Association. A second special issue with selected symposium papers will be published next year. The meeting—held in New Orleans, Louisiana from November 14 to 17, 2024—was a celebration of the range, diversity, and strength of our discipline. Philosophers of science are addressing key issues, questions, and controversies across many different areas of science. This special issue represents some of the best, cutting-edge work.

The 2024 PSA received more symposium and contributed paper submissions than at any previous PSA meeting, covering a wide array of topics. The Program Committee did an exceptional job with the daunting task of quickly reviewing this record number of submissions. Service on the PSA Program Committee always involves a significant investment of time, and this conference required even more than usual. We owe a collective debt of gratitude to the Program Committee members for their willingness to serve, careful evaluations of submissions, and overall good humor throughout the process. They were:

- Erik Angner, Stockholm University
- Maria Botero, Sam Houston State University
- Richard Bradley, London School of Economics
- Alex Broadbent, Durham University
- Cameron Buckner, University of Houston
- Eddy Chen, University of California, San Diego
- Ellen Clarke, University of Leeds
- Lisa Gannett, St Mary's University
- Leah Henderson, University of Groningen
- Marion Hourdequin, Colorado College
- Thomas Icard, Stanford University
- Janet Kourany, University of Notre Dame
- Vincent Lam, Universität Bern
- Elaine Landry, University of California, Davis
- Anna Leuschner, Bergische Universität Wuppertal
- Christian List, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München
- Caterina Marchionni, University of Milan
- Francesca Merlin, Institut d'Histoire et de Philosophie des Sciences et des Techniques
- Marco Nathan, University of Denver

- Celso Neto, University of Exeter
- Federica Russo, Utrecht University
- Samuel Schindler, Aarhus University
- Andrew Schroeder, Claremont McKenna College
- Orly Shenker, Hebrew University of Jerusalem
- Rory Smead, Northeastern University
- Mariarosaria Taddeo, Oxford University
- Nicholas Teh, University of Notre Dame
- Dana Tulodziecki, Purdue University
- Carlos Zednik, Eindhoven University of Technology
- Jiji Zhang, Catholic University of Hong Kong

Thanks to Max Cormendy and the entire Philosophy of Science Association staff who were endlessly adaptable and supportive throughout the process. Thanks also to James Weatherall and Margaret Farrell for their indispensable guidance in assembling the special issues. In addition, multiple former PSA Program Chairs provided advice and help along the way. A successful PSA conference truly requires a village.

PSA 2024 demonstrated the energy, passion, and importance of philosophy of science today. And these contributed papers show that our discipline has an even brighter future ahead of it.
