Contributors

DAVID BACHMAN is professor in and associate director of the Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies at the University of Washington, Seattle. He is completing a book on the history of China's defence industry.

CHRIS BERRY is professor of film studies in the department of media and communications at Goldsmith College, University of London. He is the editor of Chinese Films in Focus: 25 New Takes (BFI, 2003) and the author of Postsocialist Cinema in Post-Mao China: The Cultural Revolution after the Cultural Revolution (Routledge, 2004).

CHERIS SHUN-CHING CHAN is a PhD candidate of sociology at Northwestern University. Her research interests are globalization of capitalist market economy and socio-cultural changes in China. Her dissertation examines the interplay of culture and institution and global-local dynamics in making a life insurance market in China.

HON S. CHAN is associate professor in the department of public and social administration at City University of Hong Kong. He has specialized in China's civil service and nomenklatura.

BI-YU CHANG is a research fellow of the Asia Research Centre at London School of Economics and Political Science. She is writing a book on Taiwanese cultural policy and its relationship with cultural identity.

CHEN CHANGGUI is professor and deputy director of the Education Science Research Center at Zhongshan University, Guangzhou. He is also adjunct professor at Beijing University's Education and Economic Research Center, and Xiamen University's Higher Education Development and Research Center. His main research interest is human resources management in higher education. His books include Rencai wailiu yu huigui (Brain Drains and Returning) and Returnees and Use of Human Talent (in Chinese). He has also published over 70 research articles.

EMILY CHAO is associate professor of anthropology at Pitzer College. She has conducted fieldwork on the Naxi, an ethnic group living in southwest China. Her interests are gender, popular culture, globalization, and the state.

RICHARD LOUIS EDMONDS is visiting senior lecturer, geography department, King's College, University of London and associate member, Center for East Asian Studies, University of Chicago. He is currently co-editing a book on environmental NGOs in China.

BENJAMIN A. ELMAN is professor of East Asian studies and history. His teaching and research fields include: Chinese intellectual and cultural history; history of science in China; history of education in late imperial China; Sino-Japanese cultural history. His publications include: From Philosophy To Philology (1984, 1990, 2001); Classicism, Politics, and Kinship (1990); A Cultural History of Civil Examinations in Late Imperial China (2000).

STEPHAN FEUCHTWANG is a senior research associate of the department of

© The China Quarterly, 2004

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000633 Published online by Cambridge University Press anthropology, London School of Economics. He has written extensively on popular religion and politics in China and Taiwan, most recently with Wang Mingming, Grassroots Charisma: Four Local Leaders in China (Routledge, 2001).

J. MEGAN GREENE is assistant professor of history at University of Kansas. She is co-editor with Robert Ash of a forthcoming volume entitled Taiwan Encounters the Twenty-first Century: A Unique Trajectory or a Model of Development? and is finishing a book on the history of science policy in the Republic of China.

GILLES GUIHEUX is director of the French Centre for Research on Contemporary China (Centre d'études français sur la Chine contemporaine, CEFC) in Hong Kong and director of publication of Perspectives Chinoises and China Perspectives. He has published Les grands entrepreneurs privés à Taiwan, la main visible de la prospérité (Paris, Cnrs, 2002), and also numerous articles on China and Taiwan enterprises and entrepreneurs.

SAMUEL P.S. HO is professor emeritus of economics at the University of British Columbia.

ALASTAIR IAIN JOHNSTON is the Laine Professor of China in World Affairs at Harvard University.

ELISABETH KÖLL is assistant professor of modern Chinese history at Case Western Reserve University. She is the author of From Cotton Mill to Business Empire: The Emergence of Regional Enterprises in Modern China (Harvard East Asian Monograph, 2003) and several articles on Chinese business history in the late 19th and early 20th century. Her current book project involves the study of the social history of the railway in China.

AGNES S. KU is associate professor of sociology at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. Her research interests include the public sphere, civil society, citizenship, democracy, Hong Kong identity, gender issues and disability issues. She is the editor of Remaking Citizenship in Hong Kong: Community, Nation, and the Global City (Routledge, 2004, co-editor: Ngai Pun) and the author of Narratives, Politics, and the Public Sphere: Struggles over Political Reform in the Final Transitional Years in Hong Kong (1992–1994) (Ashgate, 1999).

GEORGE C.S. LIN is an associate professor in the department of geography at the University of Hong Kong.

PERRY LINK is professor of Chinese at Princeton University specializing in modern Chinese language, literature, and cultural history and author most recently of The Uses of Literature: Life in the Socialist Chinese Literary System (Princeton, 2001). His 1976 PhD is from Harvard in history and East Asian languages.

STANLEY ROSEN is a professor of political science at the University of Southern California. He is most recently the co-editor (with Peter Hays Gries) of State and Society in 21st Century China: Crisis, Contention and Legitimation (RoutledgeCurzon, 2004).

MICHAEL SCHOENHALS is director of the Centre for East and South-East

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000633 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Asian Studies, Lund University, and associate professor of Sinology with special emphasis on modern Chinese society and politics.

VERA SCHWARCZ holds the Mansfield Freeman Chair in History and East Asian studies at Wesleyan University, CT. She is the author of five books on Chinese intellectual history, including The Chinese Enlightenment, Time for Telling Truth is Running Out, and Bridge Across Broken Time: Chinese and Jewish Cultural Memory.

QIN SHAO teaches East Asian history at The College of New Jersey. She has written for Lishi yanjiu, Guangming ribao, Modern China, Journal of Asian Studies, the Stanford University Press, and other English and Chinese publications, on issues concerning Confucian statecraft in the pre-Qin to the Han period and China's modern transition in the late Qing and early Republic. She is currently working on housing reform and resistance in post-Mao China.

ALVIN Y. SO is a professor of the Division of Social Science in the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology.

CHLOË STARR teaches Chinese literature at Durham University.

RICHARD P. SUTTMEIER is professor of political science at the University of Oregon. He has written widely on Chinese scientific and technological development for a number of years.

ZIXIANG (ALEX) TAN is an associate professor at Syracuse University. He has published on telecommunications regulations, policy and industry in prestigious journals including Telecommunications Policy, INFO, The Communications of the ACM, and Communication Strategies. His co-authored book, China In the Information Age: Telecommunications and the Dilemmas of Reform, was jointly published by the Center for Strategic and International Studies and Praeger.

CZESLAW TUBILEWICZ is assistant professor at the School of Arts and Social Sciences and co-leader of the China studies and international studies programmes, Open University of Hong Kong.

FLORENT VILLARD teaches at University Jean Moulin-Lyon 3 and is a researcher at the ICLSA-Eastern and Asian Cultures and Languages Institute. His PhD on Chinese Modern Cultural history was completed in 2004. He studied at the University Jean Moulin-Lyon 3 (Chinese Studies) (1993–2000) and Beijing University of Nationalities (2002–03).

JOANNA WALEY-COHEN is professor of history at New York University and author most recently of The Sextants of Beijing: Global Currents in Chinese History (New York: W.W.Norton, 1999). She is currently working on two projects, one on military culture in Qing China and one on gastronomy in early modern China.

TIM WRIGHT works in the School of East Asian Studies, University of Sheffield. His two main research projects focus on the political economy of coal mining in contemporary China and on the impact of the 1930s world depression on China. He is the author of Coal Mining in China's Economy and Society, 1895–1937 and a number of articles on China's modern economic and social history.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000633 Published online by Cambridge University Press

YANG DER-RUEY has a PhD in anthropology (LSE, 2003) and is currently working in the National University of Singapore as a post-doctoral research fellow.

HENRY Y. H. ZHAO is reader in modern Chinese literature, SOAS. His major publications include The Uneasy Narrator: Chinese Fiction from the Traditional to the Modern and Towards a Modern Zen Theatre: Gao Xingjian and Chinese Theatre Experimentalism.

ZHOU XUN is ESRC research fellow in the history department, SOAS, University of London. Her most recent publications include Narcotic Culture: A History of Drugs in China (London and Chicago, 2004) and Smoke: A Global History (London, 2004).

DAVID ZWEIG is professor in the division of social science, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. His books include Agrarian Radicalism in China, 1968–1981, China's Brain Drain to the United States, Freeing China's Farmers: Rural Restructuring in the Reform Era and his most recent book is Internationalizing China: Domestic Interests and Global Linkages. His current research projects include overseas returned scholars in China and Hong Kong, and China's entry to the WTO.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741004000633 Published online by Cambridge University Press