Features in PMLA

Manuscripts and correspondence related to the features described below should be sent to the Managing Editor, PMLA, Modern Language Association, 26 Broadway, 3rd floor, New York, NY 10004-1789.

Special Topic

Articles on the general topic are invited; the subtopics listed are provided by way of example and suggestion only. Submissions to PMLA must meet the requirements given in the statement of editorial policy.

Comparative Racialization

Deadline for submissions: 1 March 2007

Coordinator: Shu-mei Shih (Univ. of California, Los Angeles)

For a broadly comparative perspective on the question of race, PMLA seeks contributions that analyze the literary and cultural processes of racialization from any historical period or geopolitical location. Racialization refers to the mechanisms by which race is made visible, mobilized, and experienced. Papers may seek to answer one or more of the following questions: What are the textual and other technologies of racialization in minority or majority literatures and cultures from various locations? How have the mechanisms of racialization changed? Through what strategies has racialization been confronted and negotiated?

Criticism in Translation

MLA members are invited to submit to the PMLA Editorial Board proposals for translations. Articles, as well as chapters or sections of books that can function as independent units, will be considered. The originals may be in any language. Two types of proposals are welcome: (1) significant scholarship from earlier periods that has not lost its forcefulness and whose retrieval in English in PMLA would be a noteworthy event for a broad body of readers and (2) contemporary work of sufficient weight and potential influence to merit the attention of the field as a whole.

A member who wishes to make a proposal should first ascertain that no previous English translation exists. The proposer should then provide the managing editor with the following materials: (1) a photocopy of the original essay, (2) an extended summary of the entire essay in English, (3) an introductory statement of approximately 1,000 words, prepared in accordance with MLA style, that will be published with the essay if the essay is accepted, (4) information on the copyright status of the original (if the translation is accepted for publication, the proposer will be responsible for obtaining permission to print it). In addition, if the proposer wishes to serve as translator of the essay or to designate a translator (who must also be an MLA member), a 1,000-word sample of the translation should be submitted; otherwise the Editorial Board will select a translator.

The translated essays should normally not exceed PMLA's 9,000-word limit. The Editorial Board will approve or decline the proposals, evaluate the quality of the translations, and cooperate with the proposers and translators.

Criticism in Translation

Jorge Luis Borges. "Milton and His Condemnation of Rhyme" (1926). Introduction by Angelica Duran

Carl du Prel. "The Poetic Imagination in Dreams" (1880). Introduction by Nicholas Rand

Corrections

In Patricia O'Neill's introduction to "The Social and Political Position of Woman in Ancient Egypt," by Amelia Blandford Edwards (120 [2005]: 843–57), two occurrences of the name "Edmund Wilson" should read "Erasmus Wilson" (844, 846n3). In addition, Reginald Stuart Poole's first name twice appears incorrectly as "Richard" (844, 846n3).

Little-Known Documents

MLA members are invited to submit to the PMLA Editorial Board proposals regarding little-known documentary material that merits the attention of a broad range of readers. Consideration will be given to archival data from any period and in any language that do not exceed PMLA's 9,000-word limit.

A member who wishes to make a proposal should provide the managing editor with the following materials: (1) a photocopy of the document, (2) an extended summary of the document in English, (3) an introductory statement of approximately 1,000 words, prepared in accordance with MLA style, that will be published with the document if it is accepted, (4) information on the copyright status of the original (if the document is accepted for publication, the proposer will be responsible for obtaining permission to print it). In addition, if the document is not in English and if the proposer wishes to serve as translator or to designate a translator (who must also be an MLA member), the proposal should include a 1,000-word sample of the translation; otherwise the Editorial Board will select a translator of accepted non-English material. The Editorial Board will approve or decline the proposals.

Solicited Contributions

The editor and the Editorial Board periodically invite studies and commentaries by specific authors on topics of wide interest. These contributions appear in the following series: Theories and Methodologies, The Changing Profession, The Book Market, The Journal World, Letters from Librarians, and Correspondents Abroad. MLA members are welcome to suggest topics that might be addressed under these rubrics.
