Submissions to the journal should report significant new international research, methods or matters of professional and public interest. Text must be original, well-documented and fairminded.

Please write in clear English, so your work can be understood by every member of the broader archaeological and scientific community. Contributors whose first language is not English can send a text in their own language as well, to help the Editor present their work as clearly as possible.

Initial approaches are welcome and should be directed to the editor. Draft contributions of up to 6000 words may be sent either via e-mail or as three paper copies with a 3.5in disc in Word or Word Perfect. Please give the contact address, telephone number and e-mail of the corresponding author.

Illustrations can include line drawings, black and white or colour photographs of professional quality, and should be sent as hard copies or e-pictures via e-mail Please remember that images for publication need to be scanned with a resolution of at least 300 dpi and line-drawings at least 600 dpi. If photographs are submitted electronically we prefer them to be submitted as .tif, .eps or .jpg files and images to be saved as CMYK images.

All submissions will be sent to at least two anonymous referees. If a paper is accepted, the corresponding author will be sent a digest of the referees' comments and those of the Editor, either incorporated in a letter or a proposed revision of the text. This will form the basis for acceptance. Accepted authors will be requested to return their revised text with any camera-ready art-work, and will be sent a proof for checking before publication.

Authors should receive an immediate acknowledgement that a submission has been received, a decision on acceptance and/or request for revision after peer-review within three months. Papers accepted without revision should appear within six months of submission.
