In the News . . .

Harold Spaeth, Michigan State University, US News and World Report, on developing rankings of Supreme Court justices.

Menachem Hofnung, Hebrew University, Los Angeles Times, on campaign regulations in Israel.

Larry Sabato, University of Virginia, Washington Post, on the possibility of an Obama-McCain matchup.

Robert Erikson, Columbia University, New York Times, on the possibility of a 2008 Democratic victory.

Steven Schier, Carleton College, USA Today, on prioritizing identity politics versus partisan politics.

Christopher Malone, Pace University, San Francisco Chronicle, on Obama and the white working class.

Sheldon Goldman, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, New York Times, on McCain's speech about judicial appointments.

Tom Schaller, University of Maryland, Baltimore County, CBS News, on Democrats' chances in Florida.

Miguel Centellas, Mount St. Mary's University, New York Times, on a Bolivian referendum allowing greater autonomy.

Rodolfo Espino, Arizona State University, Arizona Republic, on the recall effort against Phoenix mayor Phil Gordon.

Margaret Ferguson, Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, Boston Herald, on the Indiana Democratic primary.

Linda Fowler, Dartmouth College, Boston Globe, on how Obama should deal with his relationship to the Rev. Jeremiah Wright.

Lonna Rae Atkeson, University of New Mexico, Milwaukie Journal Sentinel, on the overemphasis placed on divisive nominating fights.

Jay Barth, Hendrix College, \ Associated Press, on a new exhibit chronicling Arkansas's political history in the twentieth century.

Robert Maranto, Villanova University, Associated Press, on the Pennsylvania Democratic primary.

James Fowler, University of California, San Diego, FOX News, on the "Colbert bump."

Brigid Harrison, Montclair State University, New York Times, on former Newark Mayor Sharpe James.

Chris Borick, Muhlenberg College, Philadelphia Inquirer, on the Pennsylvania Democratic primary.

Michael Heaney, University of Florida, ABC News, KPCC Southern California Public Radio, and Denver Post, on the anti-war movement.

Frank Gilliam, University of California, Los Angles, Boston Globe, on Obama's handling of race issues.

James Thurber, American University, NPR, on the author James Thurber and his character Walter Mitty.

Earl Black, Rice University, Houston Chronicle, on the effect of the economy on the election.

Donald Kettl, University of Pennsylvania, Boston Globe, on the effects the emphasis on integrity in Obama's campaign.

James Guth, Furman University, Washington Post, on Obama's effect on the United Church of Christ.

Michael Mezey, DePaul University, Chicago Tribune, on the need for a Democratic party leader to step up and resolve party conflict.

Paul Gronke, Reed College, USA Today, on New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer.

Michael Ross, University of California, Los Angeles, Washington Post, on new explanations for regressive gender policies in the Middle East.

Douglas A. Muzzio, Baruch College, Boston Globe, on New York Governor David Paterson.

Matthew Wilson, Southern Methodist University, San Diego Union Tribune, on Southern Baptist Convention members' stance on global warming.

Corey Cook, University of San Francisco, Chicago Tribune, on the California electorate being more likely to vote against an amendment banning gay marriage than eight years ago.

Adeed Dawisha, Miami University, NPR, on Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's weakened political position.

Jack Pitney, Claremont McKenna College, Los Angeles Times, on why Obama's wealth makes it easier for opponents to charge him with elitism.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096508230945 Published online by Cambridge University Press