NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Andrew Atherstone is tutor in history and doctrine, and Latimer research fellow, at Wycliffe Hall, Oxford. His research is focussed on Anglicanism and Evangelicalism in the 19th and 20th centuries, and his books include Oxford's Protestant Spy: The Controversial Career of Charles Golightly (Paternoster, 2007) and, as co-editor, Engaging with Martyn Lloyd-Jones (Apollos, 2011). (Wycliffe Hall, 54 Banbury Road, Oxford, OX2 6PW).

Joseph M. Fewster was until 1997 Senior Assistant Keeper in Durham University library. His work in cataloguing the extensive papers of the Earls Grey and the Ponsonby papers resulted in articles published in Journal of Imperial and Commonwealth History (1983) and (1993), the William and Mary Quarterly (1988), and in Diplomacy and Statecraft (1998). His book The Keelmen of Tyneside, Labour Organisation and Conflict in the North-East Coal Industry, 1600-183 was published by Boydell and Brewer in 2011. (22, North End, Durham City, DH1 4NJ).

Laurence Lux-Sterritt is a lecturer of British History in the Département des Études sur le Monde Anglophone at the University of Aix-Marseille, and a member of the Laboratoire de Recherches sur le Monde Anglophone (LERMA). Her research interests focus on religion and specifically Catholicism in early modern England and France. Her several published works include Redefining Female Religious Life French Ursulines and English Ladies in Seventeenth-Century Catholicism (Ashgate 2005) and Gender, Catholicism and Spirituality; Women and the Roman Catholic Church in Britain and Europe, 1200-1900 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010) which she jointly edited with Carmen Mangion. (LERMA, Université d'Aix-Marseille, 29, Avenue Robert Schuman, 13621 Aix-en-Provence).

Katharine K. Olson is a Lecturer in Medieval and Early Modern History in the University of Bangor. She also holds the post of Postdoctoral Fellow in Celtic Studies at Harvard University. Her book Popular Religion, Culture, and Reformation in Wales and the Marches, c.1400-1603 (Oxford University Press) is forthcoming in 2012. Other works forthcoming include: Reformation, Tradition, and Transformation in a Welsh Parish: St. Mary's, Swansea, 1558-1627 and the monograph Local Contexts of Change: Piety, Community, and Confessional Identity in Wales and the Marches, c.1450-1640. (School of History, Welsh History and Archaeology, Bangor University, Bangor, Gwynedd, LL57 2DG).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0034193200013200 Published online by Cambridge University Press

V. Alan McClelland, Emeritus Professor of the University of Hull, is Chairman of the Catholic Record Society and former editor of Recusant History. (91, St. Catherine's Drive, Leconfield, Nr. Beverley, E. Yorkshire, HU17 7NY).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0034193200013200 Published online by Cambridge University Press