Climate Justice in India

Climate Justice in India brings together a collective of academics, activists, and artists to paint a collage of action-oriented visions for a climate just India. They offer historically and socially grounded perspectives on justice implications for Indian society, politics, and economics. This unique and agenda-setting volume informs researchers and readers interested in topics of just transition, energy democracy, intersectionality of access to drinking water, agroecology and women's land rights, national and state climate plans, urban policy, caste justice, and environmental and climate social movements in India. It synthesizes the historical, social, economic, and political roots of climate vulnerability in India and articulates a research and policy agenda for collective democratic deliberations and action.

This crossover volume will be of interest to academics, researchers, social activists, policymakers, politicians, and general readers looking for a comprehensive introduction to the unprecedented challenge of building a praxis of justice in a climate-changed world.

Prakash Kashwan is Associate Professor of Environmental Studies at Brandeis University, Waltham, Massachusetts. At the time of preparation of this volume, he was Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Connecticut. He is the author of Democracy in the Woods (2017), editor of the journal Environmental Politics, and co-founder of the Climate Justice Network.
