A Baudouin de Courtenay Anthology

The Beginnings of Structural Linguistics

Translated and edited with an introduction by Edward Stankiewicz

Jan Baudouin de Courtenay has been an almost legendary figure in the West because few of his seminal works have been translated into Western European languages. This volume, consisting of 22 studies, translates into English for the first time the works of this Polish linguist and provides scholars with their first important contact with his ideas.

"Baudouin de Courtenay (in addition to giving extensive Slavic material) supports the solely psychological reality and non-homogeneous character of language." — Library Journal

COMMUNICATIONAL ANALYSIS AND METHODOLOGY FOR HISTORIANS

Louis George Heller

A pioneering work on the methods of linguistic analysis explaining how these methods can be used by historians and other social scientists without reference to a particular language. It opens whole new fields of scientific investigation by demonstrating how linguistic data can be used in geographical, anthropological and sociological reconstruction.

LEXICAL BORROWING IN THE ROMANCE LANGUAGES A CRITICAL STUDY OF ITALIANISMS IN FRENCH AND OF GALLICISMS IN ITALIAN FROM 1100 TO 1900

Thomas E. Hope

A descriptive, critical and theoretical study of the movement of vocabulary between French and Italian from 1100 to 1900. Some three thousand words are placed in their socio-cultural setting, with a definition, date of borrowing, relevant formal and semantic history both in the lending and the receiving languages, together with a discussion of any obscurities that may arise.

LANGUAGE AND PHILOSOPHY

Edited by Sidney Hook

A New York University Institute of Philosophy Symposium. Some professional students of linguistics, notably Noam Chomsky, have formed a sort of "counter-revolution" in philosophy which claims that the empirical tradition in knowledge from Locke down is false and the rationalistic tradition of Leibnitz, sound. The resulting debate among philosophers, linguists, and anthropologists is the chief concern of this new volume in a distinguished and widely acclaimed series.

STUDIES IN LANGUAGE

NEW IN THE SERIES

MEANING AND STRUCTURE: An Essay in the Philosophy of Language by Bernard Harrison/ An original contribution to the theory of meaning in philosophy and linguistics, the book offers a systematic unifying approach, couched in nonmetaphorical terms, to the study of the nature of meaning and the relationship between syntax and semantics. The theory proposed is essentially a "use" theory of meaning, founded upon a radical criticism of certain doctrines about language characteristic of empiricism from Locke to the present. The object is to offer a conceptual model in terms of which semantic phenomena can be understood in relation to both the system of syntactic relationships revealed by the transformational grammarians and the social and communicative aspects of language. Spring, 1971.

SEMANTIC THEORY by Jerrold J. Katz/ This volume presents a systematic theory of the semantic structure of natural language, based on and extending the ideas originally proposed in "The Structure of a Semantic Theory" and incorporating a great deal of new and as yet unpublished work. The volume is unique in being the first book length treatment of the semantic part of the theory of transformational grammar. It should be of interest to professionals and their students not only in linguistics but also in the areas of philosophy of language and logic, psycholinguistics, cognitive psychology, and anthropological linguistics. Spring, 1972.

MAUTHNER'S CRITIQUE OF LANGUAGE

GERSHON WEILER

Fritz Mauthner (1849-1923) attempted to develop a comprehensive critique of language which was to resolve a whole range of persistent and controversial philosophical problems. Mr Weiler believes that his main contribution to the philosophy of language was the working out of a complete theory of language on empirical assumptions. He places Mauthner's ideas in their historical perspective and urges that their originality be recognized and their interest reconsidered. $16.00

ENGLISH GRAMMATICAL CATEGORIES AND THE TRADITION TO 1800

IAN MICHAEL

A historical study showing the effects of the classical tradition on the analysis and teaching of English grammar.

Based on categories (parts of speech, sentence, mood, tense), it examines the development of each. Professor Michael uses the 272 English grammars known up to 1800, of which 140 have not been studied before. $32.50

JAPANESE AND THE OTHER ALTAIC LANGUAGES

Roy Andrew Miller

Employing the comparative method of the neo-grammarians, the author demonstrates the affiliation of Japanese to the other Altaic languages including Turkish, Mongol, and the Tungus languages of north-east Asia. Professor Miller explores the nature of this relationship in detail providing phonological, morphological, and lexical evidence. History and Structure of Languages series.

MEANING AND THE STRUCTURE OF LANGUAGE

Wallace L. Chafe

Mr. Chafe takes semantic structure as the basis for his original theory of the nature of language, thereby departing from the main traditions of both structuralist and transformationalist linguistics. He illustrates his theory using English, with application also to Onondaga, an Iroquois language. "Chafe has brought forth what may well prove to be a work of pivotal importance in the development of linguistics during the 1970's."—Choice

ELEMENTS OF ACOUSTIC PHONETICS

Peter Ladefoged

This book covers the material which must be understood before the laboratory techniques for acoustic analysis can be properly used. "Original in its tactics; its information is classical, and his scholarship is absolutely sound."—Martin Joos, University of Wisconsin

PRELIMINARIES TO LINGUISTIC PHONETICS

Peter Ladefoged

Surveys some of the phonetic events that occur in the languages of the world as a preliminary to developing a set of features necessary for phonological descriptions. Linguists will value Mr. Ladefoged's lucid exposition of the principles and dilemmas of linguistic phonetics within the broader context of linguistic theory.

A New Journal:

Poetics

International Review for the Theory of Literature

This journal has been created to meet the increasing need for a theoretical and methodological foundation of the study of literature.
As distinct from other journals in the field POETICS brings contributions devoted exclusively to the explicit formulation of hypotheses and theories about the systems underlying literary texts and behaviour.
POETICS mainly brings critical, introductory articles about recent literary theories but is also concerned with the systematic account of the history of literary scholarship, from classical poetics and rhetoric to modern stylistics.
POETICS will appear at irregular intervals but at least four issues per annum are being planned. Occasional special issues will be devoted to topics of particular interest to modern literary theory.

PUBLICATIONS

of the

Linguistic Society of America

LANGUAGE, the journal of the Linguistic Society of America, carries technical articles dealing with problems of linguistic science, reviews of recently published linguistic works, and notes of interest to professional linguists.

As supplements to LANGUAGE, the Linguistic Society of America issues a series of occasional publications, LANGUAGE MONOGRAPHS. These are included in the subscription price of the journal, but may also be purchased separately. In the LANGUAGE MONOGRAPH series, the Society publishes independently subsidized studies which are too long to appear as articles or are otherwise unsuitable for publication in the journal. The method of application for admission to this series of supplements, and the terms of publication, may be secured from the Secretary of the Society.

SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS in the field of linguistic science are issued by the Society from time to time. These are not included in the subscription price of the journal.

MEETING HANDBOOKS, which contain program listings and abstracts of papers presented at LSA Annual Meetings, 1965 through 1969, may also be purchased separately.

A list of publications in print is available from the Secretary of the Society. Current prices for LANGUAGE are as follows: Complete volume 43, $8.00; volume 45 onward, $16.00; single numbers currently in print from volumes 39–44, $3.00; volume 45 onward, $6.00. Reprint editions of volumes 1–38 of LANGUAGE, Monographs 1–21, and Dissertations 1–52 are available from Kraus Reprint Corporation, 16 East 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017, and a price list can be obtained from that address.
