NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Martin Dodwell is a freelance writer and researcher based in Northamptonshire. His first book, due to be published in September 2013, is a biography of Anne Line. He is currently engaged in a study of Shakespeare's poem, 'The Phoenix and Turtle'. (The Cottage, Gold Street, Walgrave, Northamptonshire, NN6 9QE)

James Hagerty is a former Headteacher of St Bede's Grammar School, Bradford. He has written extensively on the history of Catholic military chaplaincy to the British Armed Forces and on the history of the northern Catholic community. His biography of Cardinal Hinsley—Cardinal Hinsley: Priest and Patriot—was published in 2008. His second major biography Cardinal John Carmel Heenan: Priest of the People, Prince of the Church was published in 2012. He is currently engaged on a biography of Bishop William Gordon Wheeler. Dr Hagerty is a part-time tutor in Church History at the Maryvale Ecclesiastical Institute, Birmingham. (4, Moorland Garth, Leeds, LS17 6JU)

Arnold Hunt is Curator of Modern Historical Manuscripts at the British Library and a Senior Research Fellow of King's College, London. His book The Art of Hearing: English Preachers and their Audiences 1590–1640 was published by Cambridge University Press in 2010. He is currently editing vol. IX (Parochial Sermons) of the Oxford Edition of the Sermons of John Donne. (The British Library, 96 Euston Road, London, NW1 2DB)

Gerard Kilroy is Honorary Visiting Professor at University College London. His Edmund Campion: A Scholarly Life is due to be published by Ashgate in 2014. His last book was an edition of The Epigrams of Sir John Harington. This year he has had fellowships at St Catherine's College, Oxford, Marsh's Library, Dublin, and the Folger Shakespeare Library. (Department of English Language and Literature University College London, Gower Street, London, WC1E 6BT)

Diana Newton is Reader in early modern British History at Teesside University. She has written extensively on the history of north-eastern England and is currently working on the impact of Reformation on the region. (School of Arts and Media, Teeside University, Tees Valley, TS1 3BA)

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0034193200013868 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Joshua Rodda graduated in 2012 with a PhD in History from the University of Nottingham. His doctoral project, supported by the UK Arts and Humanities Research Council, was entitled '"Days of Gall and Wormwood": Public Religious Disputation in England, 1558–1626'. He has spoken on aspects of this topic at the Institute of Historical Research, the Society for Renaissance Studies annual conference and the 2012 Reformation Studies Colloquium at Durham. He is currently a tutor at Nottingham, and alongside work on articles and papers he is preparing his thesis for publication. (Department of History, University of Nottingham, University Park, Nottingham, NG7 2RD)

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0034193200013868 Published online by Cambridge University Press