Contributors

Michael Les Benedict is professor emeritus of history at the Ohio State University. President of SHGAPE from 1996 to 1998, he is the author of several books and many articles on the political, constitutional, and legal history of the United States in the nineteenth century, including most recently Preserving the Constitution: Essays on the Constitutional Politics of Reconstruction (2006). He is the author of The Blessings of Liberty (2nd ed. 2006), a standard constitutional history of the United States. He presently holds an Andrew W. Mellon Foundation Emeritus Fellowship to research popular constitutionalism in the Reconstruction era.

Edward O. Frantz is associate professor of history at the University of Indianapolis. He is finishing a book manuscript entitled "Republicans Redefined: Presidential Tours through the South, 1877–1933."

Christopher Hickman earned a Ph.D in American history at George Washington University in Washington, DC. He is revising for publication his dissertation, "The Most Dangerous Branch: The Warren Court, Its Critics, and the 1968 Presidential Election."

Brian M. Ingrassia is visiting lecturer in the History Department at Georgia State University in Atlanta. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois and is working on a book manuscript about Progressive Era intellectuals and intercollegiate football reform.

Thomas J. Jablonsky is professor of history and the Harry G. John Professor of Urban Studies at Marquette University. His books include Pride in the Jungle: Community and Everyday Life in Back of the Yards Chicago (1993), The Home, Heaven, and Mother Party (1994), and Milwaukee's Jesuit University: Marquette 1881–1981 (2007).

Mitch Kachun, associate professor of history at Western Michigan University, specializes in African American History and collective memory. He is the author of Festivals of Freedom: Memory and Meaning in African American Emancipation Celebrations, 1808–1915 (2003) and coeditor of The Curse of Caste; or, the Slave Bride: A Rediscovered African American Novel by Julia C. Collins (2006). His recent article, "From Forgotten Founder to Indispensable Icon: Crispus Attucks, Black Citizenship, and Collective Memory" (Journal of the Early Republic, Summer 2009), comes from his current project on Crispus Attucks in history and memory.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400003753 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Robert E. May, professor of history at Purdue University, is the author of three books, most recently Manifest Destiny's Underworld: Filibustering in Antebellum America (paperback reprint, 2004). He and his wife, Jill P. May, are working on a book-length study of the Gilded Age illustrator and author Howard Pyle.

Thomas R. Pegram is professor of history at Loyola University Maryland. He is the author of Partisans and Progressives (1992) and Battling Demon Rum (1998) and is writing a short history of the 1920s Ku Klux Klan.

Leslie A. Schwalm is associate professor of history, women's studies, and African American studies at the University of Iowa. Her most recent book is Emancipation's Diaspora: Race and Reconstruction in the Upper Midwest (2009).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1537781400003753 Published online by Cambridge University Press