Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London.

LUCIEN BIANCO is professor emeritus of history at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales in Paris. His most recent book, written with the collaboration of Hua Chang-ming, Jacqueries et Révolution dans la Chine du XX^e siècle, Paris 2005, won the Augustin-Thierry prize (2005).

CHRIS BRAMALL is senior lecturer at the School of East Asian Studies at Sheffield University. His main publications include In Praise of Maoist Economic Planning (1993), Sources of Chinese Economic Growth (2000), The Industrialization of Rural China (forthcoming with Oxford University Press, 2007), and Chinese Economic Development (forthcoming with Routledge, 2008).

TIMOTHY CHEEK is professor and Louis Cha Chair in Chinese Research at the Institute of Asian Research, University of British Columbia, Vancouver. He is editor of Pacific Affairs. His most recent book is Living with Reform: China since 1989 (2006).

MATTHEW M. CHEW teaches at the sociology department of the Baptist University of Hong Kong. He focuses on cultural sociology, social theory and globalization. He has written on a range of topics including dress, nightlife, online games, and Chinese philosophy.

XIUDIAN DAI is senior lecturer in the department of politics and international studies at the University of Hull. Among his research interests are politics and global political economy of new media technologies with a particular reference to China and the European Union. He is author of The Digital Revolution and Governance (Ashgate, 2000) and Corporate Strategy, Public Policy and New Technologies (Pergamon, 1996).

DELIA DAVIN is emeritus professor of Chinese studies at the University of Leeds. She has written extensively on internal migration in China.

RICHARD DESJARDINS is a Canadian civil servant. He holds an MA in Chinese politics.

MARK C. ELLIOTT is Mark Schwartz professor of Chinese and Inner Asian history at Harvard University. He earned his doctorate under Frederic Wakeman at UC Berkeley in 1993. His book, The Manchu Way, appeared in 2001. He most recently published "La Chine moderne: les Mandchous et la définition de la nation" in Annales (Nov–Dec 2006).

CHARLOTTE FURTH is professor of history at the University of Southern California, and author of A Flourishing Yin: Gender in China's Medical History 960–1665 (University of California Press, 1999). Her most recent work is as principal editor and contributor for Thinking With Cases: Specialist Knowledge in Chinese Cultural History (University of Hawai'i Press, 2007).

HAO XIAOMING is an associate professor and associate chair for research at the Wee Kim Wee School of Communication and Information, Nanyang Technological University of Singapore. His research interests include international communication, comparative media systems, social impact of new communication technologies, audience studies and media effects.

MING-SHO HO is associate professor of sociology at Nanhua University (Taiwan). He obtained his PhD from National Taiwan University in 2000 and was Fulbright Scholar in New York University from 2004 to 2005. His research topics cover labour politics, environmentalism and education reform in Taiwan. He is preparing a Chinese book on Taiwan's environmentalism and democratization, tentatively titled as "Green Democracy."

© The China Quarterly, 2007 doi:10.1017/S0305741006000890

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000890 Published online by Cambridge University Press

BEVERLEY HOOPER is emeritus professor of Chinese studies at the University of Sheffield.

RICHARD S. HOROWITZ is associate professor of history at California State University, Northridge.

CHRISTOPHER HOWE is professor in the School of East Asian Studies, University of Sheffield and research associate at SOAS. His recent research has been on Chinese energy problems, and his co-authored book with Dr Tatsu Kamabara, China and the Global Energy Crisis was published in January 2007 with Edward Elgar Publishing.

WILLIAM A. JOSEPH is a professor of political science at Wellesley College and an associate in research at the John K. Fairbank Center for East Asian Research at Harvard University. He is the co-editor and author of the China chapter in Introduction to Comparative Politics: Political Challenges and Changing Agendas (4th edition, 2006).

JOYCE K. KALLGREN is a research associate of the Institute of East Asian Studies on the Berkeley campus of the University of California. She is emerita professor of political science, Davis campus U.C.

REBECCA E. KARL is associate professor of East Asian studies and history at New York University. She is author of Staging the World: Chinese Nationalism at the Turn of the Twentieth Century (Duke University Press 2002), and of a number of articles on modern and contemporary Chinese history and culture.

JOHN James KENNEDY is an assistant professor at the University of Kansas. He is also the co-director of the Northwest Socio-economic Development Research Center (NSDRC) at Northwest University, Xi'an.

LIU SHIYUNG is assistant research fellow at the Institute of Taiwan History, Academia Sinica, Taipei. He is currently a visiting scholar at Harvard-Yenching Institute.

GREGORY W. NOBLE is professor of politics and administration, Institute of Social Science, University of Tokyo. Recent publications include "Executioner or Disciplinarian: WTO Accession and the Chinese Auto Industry," Business and Politics (2005) and "What Can Taiwan (and the United States) Expect from Japan?" Journal of East Asian Studies (2005).

ALEXANDER PANTSOV is professor of history at Capital University. He has published six books and numerous articles on Chinese and Russian Communism, including The Bolsheviks and the Chinese Revolution (2000) and Karl Radek on China: Documents and Materials (2005). His new book, Mao Zedong, will come out this spring.

MICHAEL SCHOENHALS is associate professor of Sinology with special emphasis on modern Chinese society and politics in the department of East Asian languages, Lund University. He recently co-authored Mao's Last Revolution with Roderick MacFarquhar (Harvard University Press, 2006).

STUART R. SCHRAM, formerly professor of politics with reference to China at SOAS, University of London, has more recently been engaged in editing a series of ten volumes of Mao Zedong's writings from 1912 to 1949, under the auspices of the John King Fairbank Center for East Asian Research at Harvard University. The first seven volumes of this series have already been published, and volume VIII will appear in the near future.

GÜNTER SCHUCHER is director of the Institute of Asian Affairs which is constitutive part of the German Institute of Global and Area Studies (GIGA) in Hamburg. His research focuses on social issues in the PRC, especially at the Chinese labour market. His recent publications include (with M. Schüller, eds.): Perspectives on Cross-Strait Relations. Views from Europe (2004), and (ed.) Asiens neue Wirtschaftsdynamik: Regionale und internationale Dimensionen (2006).

MARGARET SLEEBOOM-FAULKNER is senior lecturer in anthropology at the University of Sussex. Her work focuses on nationalism and processes of nation-state building in China and Japan and on biomedical technology and society in East Asia. She currently directs the Socio-genetic Marginalization in Asia Programme (SMAP) (2004–2009) and investigates the socio-economic and cultural aspects of stem cell research in China and Japan.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000890 Published online by Cambridge University Press

PHILLIP STALLEY received a PhD in political science from George Washington University and is currently a Visiting Research Fellow in the Princeton-Harvard China and the World Program.

YANQI TONG received her PhD in political science from the Johns Hopkins University. She is an associate professor at the department of political Science, University of Utah.

HONGYING WANG is associate professor of political science at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs of Syracuse University. Her research focuses on China's political, economic and diplomatic encounter with the international system. She is the author of Weak State, Strong Networks: The Institutional Dynamics of Foreign Direct Investment in China (Oxford, 2001). Currently, she is studying the diffusion of international governance norms in China.

YICHING WU is a cultural anthropologist at the University of Chicago. He works on the history of mass movement during the Cultural Revolution.

TIANTIAN ZHENG is assistant professor of sociology at State University of New York, Cortland, and co-ordinator of Asian/Middle Eastern Studies.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000890 Published online by Cambridge University Press