Contributors

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

MARIE-CLAIRE BERGÈRE is professor (emeritus) of Chinese civilization, National Institute of oriental languages and Civilizations, Paris.

COSIMA BRUNO obtained her PhD degree from London University in 2004 with a thesis entitled "Contemporary Chinese Poetry in Translation." She currently lectures on Chinese literature at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London and translates Chinese poetry into Italian. Her main research interests pertain to Chinese literature and translation studies.

WILLIAM A. CALLAHAN is professor of international politics at the University of Manchester. His latest book is Contingent States: Greater China and Transnational Relations (2004).

FENG CHEN is professor at the department of government and international studies, Hong Kong Baptist University. His current research focuses on Chinese labour politics.

CONG CAO is a research fellow at the East Asian Institute, National University of Singapore. His most recent publication is China's Scientific Elite (2004).

EILEEN J. CHENG is an assistant professor of Chinese at Pomona College and is currently working on issues of gender and visuality in modern Chinese literature and culture.

PAMELA KYLE CROSSLEY is professor of history at Dartmouth College, and author of A Translucent Mirror: History and Identity in Qing Ideology (1999) and co-author of Global Society: The World since 1900 (2003).

ARIF DIRLIK is Knight Professor of Social Science at the University of Oregon. His most recent publication is Marxism in the Chinese Revolution (2005).

RICHARD LOUIS EDMONDS is visiting senior lecturer, geography department, King's College, University of London, and associate member, Center for East Asian Studies, University of Chicago.

DAFYDD FELL is the Taiwan Studies research fellow at the Centre for Financial and Management Studies and visiting lecturer at the Politics Department at the London School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS). He is the co-ordinator of the SOAS Taiwan studies programme and the European Association of Taiwan Studies. In 2004 he was a visiting scholar at the National Sun Yat-sen University and the international visiting fellow at the Taiwan Foundation for Democracy. His first book is Party Politics in Taiwan (2005). He has published journal articles on party change, election campaigning and inner party democracy in Taiwan.

© The China Quarterly, 2005

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741005000627 Published online by Cambridge University Press

FU HUALING is associate professor and director of the Centre for Comparative and Public Law, Faculty of Law, the University of Hong Kong. He has published widely on the criminal justice system, dispute resolution and human rights in China. His research interests include sociology of law, constitutional law and legal relations between Hong Kong and Mainland China.

PETER HAYS GRIES is assistant professor in the department of political science, University of Colorado, and the co-director of the Sino-American Security Dialogue. His latest book is China's New Nationalism: Pride, Politics, and Diplomacy (2004).

GILLES GUIHEUX is director of the French Centre for Research on Contemporary China (CEFC) in Hong Kong and director of publication of Perspectives chinoises and China Perspectives. He has published Les grands entrepreneurs privés à Taiwan, la main visible de la prospérité (2002). His current book project focuses on the private sector in mainland China.

CHRISTOPHER HOWE FBA is research professor in Chinese business management, School of Oriental and African Studies.

CHANG-TAI HUNG is chair professor of humanities in the division of humanities at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. His most recent book is Xin wenhuashi yu Zhongguo zhengzhi (The New Cultural History and Chinese Politics) (2003).

SUKHAN JACKSON is a senior lecturer in the school of economics, University of Queensland, Australia. She is the author of Chinese Enterprise Management. Reforms in Economic Perspective (1992). Her research and publications in the China area include labour and management, development and health aspects of the Three Gorges dam, and health financing in rural China.

ELLEN R. JUDD is professor of anthropology at the University of Manitoba. She is the author of Gender and Power in Rural North China (1994) and The Chinese Women's Movement between State and Market (2002). Her current research is focused on gender, land, mobility and depopulation in west China.

CHRISTOPHER KAPLONSKI is a research associate at the Mongolia and Inner Asia Studies Unit, University of Cambridge, and also teaches anthropology at William Paterson University, New Jersey. He has carried out research on Mongolian politics and culture since the early 1990s.

BEATRICE LEUNG is professor in the department of international affairs, Wenzao Ursuline College of Languages, Taiwan. Her research interest is on various aspects of church-state relations especially on Sino-Vatican relations, religious policy, and religious education in China, Taiwan, Hong Kong SAR and Macau SAR. She has written more than thirty articles in academic journals, and she is the author and editor of seven books. The most recent one is The Chinese Catholic Church in Conflict: 1949–2001 (with William T. Liu) (2004).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741005000627 Published online by Cambridge University Press

TAO LI is a post-doctoral research fellow in Chinese business and management at SOAS. His research interests include transition economies, Chinese economy, corporate finance and corporate governance. He received his PhD from the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology in 2003.

NATHAN LIGHT wrote his dissertation on the cultural politics of the Uyghur Twelve Muqam classical song tradition based on fieldwork in Xinjiang, China. He received his PhD in Folklore from Indiana University. This year he is teaching cultural anthropology at the American University – Central Asia in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, and doing research on local history narratives.

ANDREW C. MERTHA is assistant professor in the department of political science (program in international/area studies), Washington University in St. Louis. He has just published The Politics of Piracy: Intellectual Property in Contemporary China (2005).

BARRY SAUTMAN, a political scientist and lawyer, is an associate professor in the division of social science, Hong Kong University of Science & Technology. The present focus of his research is on nationalism and ethnic politics in China and PRC-Africa linkages.

RONALD SCHWARTZ is professor of sociology at Memorial University in St. John's, Newfoundland. He is author of Circle of Protest: Political Ritual in the Tibetan Uprising (1994), and has written extensively on the political, social and economic situation in contemporary Tibet.

METTE THUNØ is associate professor at the department of Asian studies of the University of Copenhagen. She has researched and written extensively on Chinese international migration. Her latest book (co-authored with Frank Pieke, Pal Nyeri and Antonella Ceccagno) is Chinese Transnationalism: The Fujianese in Europe (2004).

LUIGI TOMBA works at the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University, Canberra, in the department of political and social change and the Contemporary China Centre. His latest book is Paradoxes of Labour Reform. Chinese Labour Theory and Practice from Socialism to the Market (2002). His research interests in China include urban governance, class formation, social change and stratification, housing reform and community building. He is the new co-editor, with Andrew Kipnis, of The China Journal.

TIM WRIGHT works in the School of East Asian Studies, University of Sheffield. His two main research projects focus on the political economy of coal mining in contemporary China and on the impact of the 1930s world depression on China.

XIAOMING ZHANG is associate professor of strategy and international security at the Air War College in the United States. He authored Red Wings over the Yalu: China, the Soviet Union and the Air War in Korea (2002), and is currently working on a manuscript assessing the role and performance of the People's Liberation Army during the Cold War.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741005000627 Published online by Cambridge University Press