ATLAS OF AFRICAN PREHISTORY

Compiled by
J. D. Clark

under the auspices of the Pan-African
Congress on Prehistory

The first to represent a whole continent, these maps relate human evolution to its setting in prehistoric Africa. Many experts collaborated to produce 12 base maps of ecology and paleoecology and 32 transparent overlays showing political boundaries, cultural distributions, fossil fauna, fossil man sites, and present-day discontinuous distributions of certain mammals and birds. A pamphlet explains the maps and overlays. Produced with aid from the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research.

BACKGROUND TO EVOLUTION
IN AFRICA

Edited by W. W. Bishop
and J. D. Clark

New evidence by paleontologists, geologists, and archeologists has revised established ideas about the origins and development of land areas, animal species, patterns of vegetation, of man and his hominid and hominoid predecessors. The evidence presented in these papers will constitute basic reading for scientists attending the Sixth Pan-African Congress on Prehistory and Quaternary Research. Papers in English and French are preceded by abstracts in the other language, making a body of important material available to an enlarged audience.

TOWARDS A PAX AFRICANA

A Study of Ideology and Ambition

Ali A. Mazrui

"Perhaps the most crucial aspect of the ethic of self-government in Africa lies in the African's ambition to be his own policeman," Mazrui writes. Today Africans are jealously assuming the task of keeping peace within their continent and preserving it from further foreign intervention. Mazrui describes their efforts to achieve self-pacification by examining the search for an African identity, the concept of racial sovereignty, the development of native political leadership, and the Pan-African movement. "Nature of Human Society" series.
