NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Stephanie Bertels is an associate professor at the Beedie School of Business at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, Canada. Stephanie studies organizational compliance and explores how organizations make the transition towards sustainability by undertaking practitioner informed research on sustainable operations, embedding sustainability and sustainable innovation. E-mail: stephanie_bertels@sfu.ca.

Kenneth D. Butterfield is an associate professor and chair of the Department of Management, Information Systems, and Entrepreneurship in the Carson College of Business at Washington State University. His current research focuses on reparative and restorative responses to misconduct in the workplace. His research has been published in leading management journals such as Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Journal of Business Ethics and featured in media outlets such as The Wall Street Journal, The Economist, The New York Times, and The Washington Post. E-mail: kdb@wsu.edu.

Michael Cody recently defended his Ph.D. dissertation at the University of British Columbia Law School. He works in the area of corporate regulation. He has over fifteen years experience as an outside counsel, in-house counsel, corporate executive, and entrepeneur. He was the gold medalist at the University of Western Ontario Law School. E-mail: codesinwine@gmail.com.

Graham Dietz is reader in organizational behavior and HRM at Durham University Business School, Durham, UK. His research centers on understanding trust dynamics inside organizations. He has published in several leading international journals, including the Academy of Management Review, Human Relations, the International Journal of Human Resource Management, and Organization. In addition, he runs training workshops on trust. He has a Ph.D. from the London School of Economics. E-mail: graham.dietz@durham.ac.uk.

Wim Dubbink is professor of business ethics at Tilburg University and member of Tilburg Sustainability Centre (TSH). His area of specialization is Kantian business ethics. Topics he writes about are integrity management, beneficence in business, the political duties of business and evilness in business. E-mail: W.Dubbink@uvt.nl.

Ronald F. Duska, Ph.D., is president of Duska Business Ethics Consulting, where he engages in business ethics consulting, lecturing, workshops, and developing and presenting continuing education programs. He is a member of the board and past president of the Society of Business Ethics, the publisher of Business Ethics Quarterly. Currently, he is an adjunct professor at St. Joseph's and Villanova Universities. From 1996 to 2011, he held the Charles Lamont Post Chair of Ethics and the Professions at The American College, where he co-founded and served as the director of the College's Center for Ethics as well as created The Mitchell Forum, which brings together chief executives and business ethicists. A professor emeritus at Rosemont College, he has taught at The Wharton School, The University of Virginia, Pennsylvania State University, and St. John's University. He is a senior fellow at the Olson Center of the University of Virginia and a senior fellow at the Pedro Arrupe Center for Business Ethics as St. Joseph's University. He is the author, co-author, and editor of numerous articles as well as several books, including Accounting Ethics (2nd edition); Business Ethics (2nd edition); Ethics for the Financial Services Professional; Contemporary Reflections on Business Ethics; Organizational Behavior in Insurance; The Next Phase of Business Ethics: Integrating Psychology and Ethics; Moral Development: A Guide to Piaget and Kohlberg; Ethics and Corporate Responsibility: Theory Cases and Dilemmas; and Education, Leadership, and Business Ethics: A Symposium in Honor of Clarence Walton. His web site is www.businessethicszone.com. E-mail: ronaldduska1@gmail.com.

©2014 Business Ethics Quarterly 24:3 (July 2014); ISSN 1052-150X pp. 489–492
DOI: 10.5840/beq201424317

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424317 Published online by Cambridge University Press

NICOLE GILLESPIE is senior lecturer in management at UQ Business School, The University of Queensland. She completed her Ph.D. in organizational psychology and management at the University of Melbourne in 2004 and has held faculty positions at Warwick Business School and Melbourne Business School. Her research focuses on trust in organizational contexts, particularly trust building and development, designing trustworthy organizations, repairing organizational trust after major failures, and managing stakeholder trust. Dr Gillespie's research appears in leading international journals such as Academy of Management Review, Journal of Management, and Sloan Management Review). She is dedicated to translating trust research into practice and has written a commissioned report entitled "Building and Repairing Organizational Trust" for the Institute of Business Ethics, as well as a policy note on restoring trust in the financial sector for the UK Parliament. E-mail: n.gillespie@business.uq.edu.au.

JERRY GOODSTEIN is a professor in the Department of Management at Washington State University in Vancouver, Washington. He received his Ph.D. (management) from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1988 and his M.B.A. from the University of California, Los Angeles, in 1978. His work has been published in such journals as Administrative Science Quarterly, Academy of Management Journal, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Organizational Behavior, Journal of Management, Organization Science, Organization Studies, and Strategic Management Journal. Dr. Goodstein served on the editorial boards of Academy of Management Journal (1994–1998), Administrative Science Quarterly (1996–2005), and Journal of Management, where he served as Associate Editor (2006–2008). He is currently on the editorial board of Business Ethics Quarterly, serving as Associate Editor. His current research interests are in the areas of restorative justice in organizations and corporate and stakeholder responsibility. E-mail: jgoodstein@vancouver.wsu.edu.

DENA M. GROMET is a postdoctoral research fellow with the Risk Management and Decision Processes Center at The Wharton School (University of Pennsylvania). She received her Ph.D. in psychology from Princeton University. Her research on justice investigates how people respond to wrongdoing, particularly with regard to their preferences for retributive and reparative responses. E-mail: denag@wharton.upenn.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424317 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Robert W. Kolb is professor of finance at Loyola University Chicago, where he holds the Considine Chair of Applied Ethics. Kolb received two Ph.D.s from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (philosophy 1974, finance 1978). Kolb served as the general editor of the five-volume Encyclopedia of Business Ethics and Society (Sage Publications, 2008), and he recently published The Financial Crisis of Our Time (2011) and Too Much Is Not Enough: Incentives in Executive Compensation (2012), both from Oxford University Press, and The Natural Gas Revolution: At the Pivot of the World's Energy Future, (Financial Times Press, 2013). E-mail: BobKolb@me.com.

Steve Lockey is a doctoral candidate at Durham University Business School in the UK. His primary research focus is on trust and trust repair, with a particular emphasis on the role that affect plays in these processes. E-mail: s.j.lockey@durham.ac.uk.

Chris MacDonald teaches at Ryerson University's Ted Rogers School of Management in Toronto, Canada. He is co-author of two successful textbooks, namely The Power of Critical Thinking (with Lewis Vaughn) and Business Ethics: Decision-Making for Personal Integrity & Social Responsibility (with Joseph DesJardins and Laura Hartman). He is also author of the popular Business Ethics Blog (businessethicsblog.com) and founding co-editor of the Business Ethics Journal Review (bejr.org). E-mail: chris.macdonald@ryerson.ca.

Tyler G. Okimoto is a senior lecturer in management in the business school at the University of Queensland, Australia. He received his Ph.D. in social and organizational psychology from New York University in 2005, and has worked as a postdoctoral researcher in the School of Management at Yale University, and in the School of Psychology at Flinders University in Australia. His research considers how injustice threatens the self-concept of the involved parties, and the implications of those threats for understanding their subjective sense of "justice." E-mail: t.okimoto@business.uq.edu.au.

Simon Pek is a doctoral student at Simon Fraser University researching sustainability and organizational change. He is also a board member of a society working in the field of restorative justice. Prior to commencing his doctoral studies he worked in the field of international business. E-mail: spek@sfu.ca.

Michael D. Pfarrer is is an associate professor in the Terry College of Business at the University of Georgia. He received his Ph.D. in strategic management from the University of Maryland. His research focuses on organizational reputation and celebrity, impression and crisis management, media accounts, and the role of business in society. E-mail: mpfarrer@uga.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424317 Published online by Cambridge University Press

MICHAEL WENZEL is an associate professor in the School of Psychology at Flinders University, Adelaide, Australia. He completed his Ph.D. at the University of Münster, Germany, in 1996, and subsequently held positions as lecturer in the Department of Social Psychology at the University of Jena, Germany, and as research fellow at the Research School of Social Sciences, Australian National University, Canberra, Australia. Dr. Wenzel's research focuses on issues of justice and fairness, their restoration after wrongdoing in interpersonal and intergroup relations, victims' motivation to punish or forgive as well as offenders' coping with shame/guilt towards self-forgiveness and moral repair. E-mail: michael.wenzel@flinders.edu.au.

ANDREW C. WICKS is the Ruffin Professor of Business Administration in the Darden School, University of Virginia. He is director of the Olsson Center for Applied Ethics (http://www.darden.virginia.edu/web/olsson-center-for-applied-ethics/), director of the doctoral program, and academic advisor for the Business Roundtable Institute for Corporate Ethics (http://www.corporate-ethics.org/). Wicks also serves as an adjunct professor in the Religious Studies department and the Frank Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy at the University of Virginia. Wicks is co-author of four books, including Managing for Stakeholders: Survival, Reputation and Success (2007); Business Ethics: A Managerial Approach (2010), Stakeholder Theory: The State of the Art (2010), and Public Trust in Business (2014). He has published over thirty journal articles, and his work has appeared in a wide variety of journals in business ethics, management, and the humanities. His research interests include stakeholder responsibility, stakeholder theory, trust, health care ethics, total quality management, and ethics and entrepreneurship. He works with MBA students, executives, and corporations in the United States and abroad. He has developed an array of teaching materials and cases as well as online ethics simulations (with Ethics-LX). E-mail: wicksa@darden.virginia.edu.

https://doi.org/10.5840/beq201424317 Published online by Cambridge University Press