Signs and elegies

New from Chicago

Crimes of Art and Terror
Frank Lentricchia and Jody McAuliffe

"As the planet moves, with a grim relentless urgency, toward destruction brought on by our own follies, I can think of no better place to begin understanding our bleak situation than by reading this timely study by Jody McAuliffe and Frank Lentricchia. Working by association, linking the real with the imagined, upsetting the usual order of criticism by their disruptive readings, McAuliffe and Lentricchia bring us into the new century with a fresh and original work that dissolves the familiar boundaries between art and criticism, between life and critiques of life. The pressure of their strong, unruly imaginations can be felt on every page. Crimes of Art and Terror should become a classic of contemporary literature, a way into a new, unbridled form of critical thought."
—Jay Parini

Cloth $22.50

The Dominion of the Dead
Robert Pogue Harrison

"This fascinating, wonderfully suggestive, and highly original meditation takes up the deceptively simple question: how do the living relate to the dead? . . . Drawing on Vico and Heidegger, on poets from Homer and Virgil to Rimbaud and Rilke, Joyce and Stevens, and on architectural images ranging from the empty tomb of the risen Christ to Maya Lin's Vietnam Veterans Memorial, The Dominion of the Dead is one of those rare studies that will genuinely change your consciousness."
—Marjorie Perloff

Cloth $22.50

Signs and Cities
Black Literary Postmodernism
Madhu Dubey

"Dubey challenges readers to reconsider the significance of literacy and the vernacular in African American literature and theory. She boldly explores key contradictions in black theoretical discourse and examines the connections between African American and postmodern cultural studies. Full of fresh and insightful readings of a wide variety of texts, Signs and Cities consolidates Dubey's position as one of the most influential critics of both contemporary and African American literatures."
—Valerie Smith, Princeton University

So Black and Blue
Ralph Ellison and the Occasion of Criticism
Kenneth W. Warren

"If the novel is the form of literature most intimately tied to the particulars of a time, place, culture, and society, then is it not possible that very great novels, or masterpieces, may be more local and less timeless than we have usually imagined? So Black and Blue explores Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man as well as Ellison's critical corpus to consider this intriguing question. This is an excellent and distinctive work of scholarship."—Jonathan Arac, Columbia University

Boys Will Be Boys
A Daughter's Elegy
Sara Suleri Goodyear

Boys Will Be Boys is a brilliant and elegant elegy for the author's father, the prominent political journalist Z. A. Suleri, known as Pip. Taking her title from that jokingly chosen by her father for his unwritten autobiography, Boys Will Be Boys dips in and out of Suleri Goodyear's upbringing in Pakistan and her life in the United States. Deftly moving between public and private history, Suleri Goodyear—whom the Village Voice called "a Proust in Pakistan"—continually addresses questions of loss and cultural displacement through a resolutely comic lens.

The Politics of Talk and Reputation in Medieval Europe

The Grammar of Good Intentions
Race and the Antebellum Culture of Benevolence
Susan M. Ryan
"The Grammar of Good Intentions is a marvelous book. It offers a way of reframing issues that have become central to the study of nineteenth-century literature and culture, and productively and importantly challenges how they can be seen. Susan M. Ryan makes it clear that the habits and anxieties of benevolence affected how nineteenth-century Americans thought about race."—Karen Sánchez-Eppler, Amherst College. 10 illustrations. $42.50

Paternalism Incorporated
Fables of American Fatherhood, 1865–1940
David Leverenz
"Paternalism Incorporated considers the (generally overlooked) complexity of paternalism, and, through that inquiry, offers new insight into the rise of corporate culture in the late nineteenth- and early twentieth-century U.S. Especially impressive is David Leverenz's keen eye for how a variety of social and literary phenomena contribute to the articulation of paternalism, which, in turn, constitutes an important mechanism of the rise of corporatism in the U.S. Also noteworthy is his account of exactly how literature contributes to and reflects social transformation."—Priscilla Wald, Duke University. $39.95

Heidegger's Roots
Nietzsche, National Socialism, and the Greeks
Charles Bambach
An essential reference in the debates over one of the twentieth century's most influential—and controversial—philosophers, this book demonstrates the profound influence on Heidegger's work of both historical context and the other thinkers with whom he engaged in dialogue. These latter include not only the ancient Greeks and such German predecessors as Hegel, Hölderlin, and Nietzsche, but also those contemporaries of the radical right from whom he would later try to distance himself.$45.00

Vico's Uncanny Humanism
Reading the "New Science" between Modern and Postmodern
Sandra Rudnick Luft
"Here is a new, captivating, and deeply learned reading of Vico's New Science. Relying on some postmodern as well as rabbinical insights, Luft finds in Vico's work a vindication of poetic creativity outside the parameters of traditional humanist and theological interpretations focused on subjective agency. Leaving behind the modern subject and its so-called 'end,' Vico emerges as the champion of a transformative praxis appropriate for our time."
—Fred Dallmayr, Notre Dame.
