GUEST EDITORIALS FOR BRITISH ACTUARIAL JOURNAL

The Journal Committee of the British Actuarial Journal keeps the content, quality and scope of what appears in the British Actuarial Journal under constant consideration. As a result of this, some new initiatives are due to come into fruition in the near future.

The first of these is the introduction of Guest Editorials. These will be written, by invitation from the Editor, by distinguished and eminent people, both actuaries and non-actuaries. The subject matter is to be chosen by the writer, although it will be of interest to readers of British Actuarial Journal.

Guest Editorials will appear from Volume 7, Part II, and in all following parts, except those where the Addresses of the Presidents of the Faculty and of the Institute are printed.

The first one will be written by Professor David Wilkie, a Fellow of both the Faculty and the Institute, among his many attributes, and the first Chairman of the Journal Committee.
