Contributors

RAMSES AMER is a senior lecturer at the department of political science, Umeå University, Umeå, Sweden. His areas of research are security issues and conflict resolution in Southeast Asia and the wider Pacific Asia, and the role of the United Nations in the international system. He is co-editor, with Carlyle A. Thayer, of Vietnamese Foreign Policy in Transition (St Martin's Press, 1999).

ROBERT ASH is professor of economics with special reference to China and Taiwan in the department of economics and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, and director of the Taiwan studies programme, at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.

T. H. BARRETT is professor of East Asian history at SOAS, University of London. His main interests lie in the history of religion in China, but also in constructions of China in the West, particularly Great Britain.

MARC BLECHER is professor of politics and East Asian studies at Oberlin College, USA. His current research focuses on workers' politics and on the role of local government in urbanization in Xinji Municipality, Hebei, where he has been working since 1979.

CHRIS BRAMALL is senior lecturer at the School of East Asian Studies at Sheffield University. His main publications include In Praise of Maoist Economic Planning (1993), Sources of Chinese Economic Growth (2000), The Industrialization of Rural China (forthcoming with Oxford, 2007) and Chinese Economic Development (forthcoming with Routledge, 2008).

COSIMA BRUNO obtained her PhD degree from London University in 2004 with a thesis entitled "Contemporary Chinese Poetry in Translation." She currently lectures on Chinese literature at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London and translates Chinese poetry into Italian. Her main research interests pertain to Chinese literature and translation studies.

TERENCE J. BYRES is emeritus professor of political economy in the University of London. He was a founder editor of the Journal of Peasant Studies and was one of its editors between 1973 and 2000. He is currently joint editor of the Journal of Agrarian Change.

ELAINE CHAN is honorary associate professor and research officer at the Centre for Civil Society and Governance, The University of Hong Kong.

JOSEPH CHAN is associate professor at the Department of Politics and Public Administration and Honorary Director of the Centre for Civil Society and Governance, The University of Hong Kong.

YOUNG NAM CHO is an assistant professor at the Graduate School of International Studies, Seoul National University. He has published several papers on the Chinese legislative system, political reforms, and political corruption, which appeared in

© The China Quarterly, 2006 doi: 10.1017/S0305741006000452

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000452 Published online by Cambridge University Press

The China Quarterly, Issues & Studies, and Asian Perspective. His current research topic is to analyze the shifting state-society relations in terms of legalization perspective.

SUSETTE COOKE is a lecturer in China Studies at the University of Technology, Sydney. Her research focuses on Tibetan areas of the People's Republic of China.

ELISABETH J. CROLL is professor of Chinese Anthropology and Vice-Principal of the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS). Her forthcoming book, entitled China's New Consumers: Social Development and Domestic Demand is to be published by Routledge in October 2006.

YANGDON DHONDUP received her PhD from the School of Oriental and African Studies in 2004. She is a research assistant at the Section de langues et civilisations orientales, University of Lausanne.

JANE DUCKETT is senior lecturer in politics at the University of Glasgow. Her current research looks at the making of Chinese health policy.

JACOB EDMOND is lecturer in modern and contemporary poetry in the Department of English at the University of Otago. He has published on aesthetic, social, and political aspects of modern and contemporary poetry in Chinese, Russian, and English. Recent articles include "Beyond Binaries: Rereading Yang Lian's 'Norlang' and 'Banpo,'" in Journal of Modern Literature in Chinese 6.1 (2005) and "Lyn Hejinian and Russian Estrangement," which is forthcoming in Poetics Today.

THOMAS ERTMAN is associate professor of sociology at New York University and director of its Berlin programme. He is the author of Birth of the Leviathan: Building States and Regimes in Medieval and Early Modern Europe (Cambridge University Press, 1997), which was awarded the Barrington Moore Prize for the best book in historical sociology.

DAFYDD FELL is the Taiwan Studies research fellow at the Centre for Financial and Management Studies and visiting lecturer at the Politics Department at SOAS. He is the co-ordinator of the SOAS Taiwan studies programme and the European Association of Taiwan Studies. In 2004 he was a visiting scholar at the National Sun Yat-sen University and the international visiting fellow at the Taiwan Foundation for Democracy. He recently published Party Politics in Taiwan: Party Change and the Democratic Evolution of Taiwan, 1991–2004 (Routledge, 2005).

JACK GRAY was one of the leading British scholars of 20th-century China. Before his retirement in 1989, he held posts at SOAS, Glasgow, and the Institute of Development Studies at Sussex. In addition to numerous articles he is best known for Rebellions and Revolutions: China from the 1800s to 2000 (Oxford University Press, 2002). At the time of his death in 2004, his planned political biography of Mao was still in note form. The article published here is part of this project.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000452 Published online by Cambridge University Press

MARK HANSELL is professor of Chinese at Carleton College in Minnesota, USA. He specializes in the study of linguistic borrowing and writing systems. He has some inside knowledge of Chinese popular media from a stint as a pop musician in Taiwan in the late 1970s–early 1980s.

MARK HARRISON is research fellow in Chinese Studies at the Centre for the Study of Democracy at the University of Westminster in London. His book, Legitimacy, Meaning and Knowledge in the Making of Taiwanese Identity, will be published by Palgrave Macmillan in November 2006.

EUNSUK HONG is a PhD candidate at the Department of Financial and Management Studies, SOAS, University of London. His research interests include spatial allocation of FDI, relationship between FDI and international trade, with an emphasis on the context of East Asia.

CHRISTOPHER HOWE is professor in the School of East Asian Studies, University of Sheffield and research associate at the School of Oriental and African Studies. His recent research has been on Chinese energy problems, and his co-authored book with Dr Tatsu Kamabara, China and the Global Energy Crisis, will be published in early 2007.

YOU-TIEN HSING is associate professor of geography at the University of California, Berkeley. She is also an affiliated researcher at the sociology division of the e-Institute at Shanghai University. She is the author of Making Capitalism in China: The Taiwan Connection (Oxford University Press, 1998). Her recent works have focused on land and territorial restructuring in China's late-socialist transformation.

ANN HUSS is assistant professor of Chinese Studies at the Centre for East Asian Studies, The Chinese University of Hong Kong. She is at work on a biography of the Shanghai author Shi Zhecun and is translating Ge Fei's most recent novel, Renmian taohua, for which she was awarded a 2006 PEN Translation Grant.

JOYCE K. KALLGREN is professor emerita of political science (Davis campus) and Research Associate Institute of East Asian Studies University of California Berkeley.

REBECCA E. KARL is associate professor of East Asian Studies and History at New York University. She is the author of Staging the World: Chinese Nationalism at the Turn of the Twentieth Century (Duke University Press, 2002) and co-editor (with Peter Zarrow) of Rethinking the 1898 Reform Period: Political and Cultural Change in Late Qing China (Harvard University East Asia Center, 2002).

Y. Y. KUEH is professor of business administration and dean of the Faculty of Commerce at Chuhai College, Hong Kong. He taught at various universities in Hong Kong, the USA and Australia for over 30 years, and retired recently to join Chuhai, a private, government-recognized, degree-awarding institution. His research on the Chinese economy (industry, agriculture, trade and economic reforms) has produced many publications including books published by Oxford Clarendon, Palgrave-Macmillan, RoutledgeCurzon, Hong Kong University Press, and numerous articles in international academic journals.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000452 Published online by Cambridge University Press

MARC LAPERROUZA obtained his PhD on China's telecommunication reforms from the London School of Economics' Information Systems Department. He is now a Special Advisor in the Evian Group, a think tank dealing with global governance issues.

LIU JIANHUI is professor and director of the department of history of the Chinese Communist Party, the Central Party School. He conducts research in the areas of the decision-making of the CCP, the Siqing Movement and the Great Cultural Revolution, and his most recent publication is Zhongguo gongchandang de zhizheng jingyan (The Ruling Experiences of the CCP) (Zhejiang renmin chubanshe, 2005).

ANDREA MCELDERRY is professor emeritus of history at the University of Louisville. She has published work on Qing and Republican business organization and her most recent research concerns securities markets in twentieth-century China.

RAMON H. MYERS is emeritus senior fellow and consultant to the East Asian Archives of the Hoover Institution, Stanford University.

GREGORY W. NOBLE is professor of politics and administration, Institute of Social Science, University of Tokyo. Recent publications include "Executioner or Disciplinarian: WTO Accession and the Chinese Auto Industry," (Business and Politics, 2005) and "What Can Taiwan (and the United States) Expect from Japan?" (Journal of East Asian Studies, 2005).

MARK SELDEN is a senior lecturer in the East Asia Program at Cornell University and a co-ordinator of the Japan Focus e-journal on Japan and the Asia Pacific. He is a co-author of Chinese Village, Socialist State and of Revolution, Resistance and Reform in Village China (2005).

JUDITH SHAPIRO directs the Global Environmental Politics Program at American University's School of International Service and is the author of Mao's War against Nature: Politics and the Environment in Revolutionary China (Cambridge University Press, 2001).

LAIXIANG SUN is Chair Professor of Chinese Business and Management at the Department of Financial and Management Studies, SOAS, University of London. He is also a research professor at the Institute of Geographic Sciences and Natural Resources Research in the China Academy of Sciences, and affiliated with the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis in Laxenburg, Austria, and Guanghua School of Management in Peking University, Beijing, China. His research interests include corporate finance and corporate governance, comparative economics, and Chinese business and management.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000452 Published online by Cambridge University Press

RICHARD P. SUTTMEIER is professor of political science at the University of Oregon. His current research is focused on the role of technical standards in Chinese technology policy and on science and technology in China-US relations.

EDWARD VICKERS is lecturer in comparative education at the Institute of Education, University of London. His publications include In Search of an Identity: The Politics of History as a School Subject in Hong Kong, 1960s–2005 and (with Alisa Jones) History Education and National Identity in East Asia (both published by Routledge). He has recently surveyed China's education system for a jointly-authored report commissioned by the UK's Department for International Development – Education and Development in a Global Era: Strategies for "Successful" Globalisation.

WANG HONGXU is professor of political science at the Institute of International Strategic Studies, the Central Party School. His most recent publication is Dazhanlue: Deng Xiaoping yu zuguo tongyi (Grand Strategy: Deng Xiaoping and the Reunification of China) (Jiouzhou Press, 2004), and he is writing a book on Chinese Strategy towards Britain.

YU LIU is currently a PhD candidate in the department of political science, Columbia University. Her dissertation is on the legitimacy production in Mao's China.

DINGXIN ZHAO is associate professor at the Department of Sociology, University of Chicago. His fields of interest are political sociology, social movement and collective behaviour, and historical sociology.

ZHENG TIANTIAN is an assistant professor of anthropology at State University of New York, Cortland, and co-ordinator of Asian/Middle Eastern Studies.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0305741006000452 Published online by Cambridge University Press