FOREWORD

The general principles which I have followed in making the present study in Latin word-order have been outlined in an article by B. L. Ullman in Classical Journal, Vol. XIV (1918), pp. 404-417, entitled Latin Word-Order. My own interest in this subject began a few years ago while making a similar study of the possessive and demonstrative adjectives in Cato and Varro under the direction of Professor Ullman, then head of the Latin department in the State University of Iowa. I desire to acknowledge my indebtedness to Professors John C. Rolfe and Roland G. Kent of the University of Pennsylvania for helpful suggestions and criticisms given while making the present study. My thanks are also due to the librarians in the University of Chicago for the free loan of reference books and for their kind assistance in using the Classical Library at that place.
