Contributors

THOMAS CLARK, who received his Ph.D. from UCLA in 1994, is an assistant professor of History at the University of Nebraska at Kearney. He has published articles on labor law and labor politics in Studies in American Political Development and California History. His most recent research examines the cooperative programs of the Farm Security Administration.

CHRISTOPHER A. COLDERLEY is a graduate student completing his dissertation at McGill University in Montreal. His research examines the evolving relationship between government and the nonprofit sector in Canadian housing throughout the post-World War II period.

JOHN GERRING, an assistant professor at Boston University, has recently completed Party Ideologies in America, 1828–1996 (Cambridge University Press, 1998), and has written articles for JPH, Party Politics, Polity, Social Science History, and Studies in American Political Development. He is currently at work on a book on social science methodology.

BRIAN WADDELL received his Ph.D. at the City University of New York Graduate Center, and is an assistant professor of Political Science at the University of Connecticut. He has published articles on the modernization of U.S. governance during World War II and has finished a book on the subject.

https://doi.org/10.1353/jph.1999.0004 Published online by Cambridge University Press