Section 2 Law and Courts $10

The purpose of this Section is to promote interest in teaching and research in the areas of law and the judicial process. The Section maintains an active web site at <artsci.wustl.edu/~polisci/lawcourt/> that includes working papers, teaching materials, data sets, a membership directory, the Section bylaws, and more. The Section also runs the Law and Politics Book Review which is available at <www.polsci.wvu.edu/lpbr>. LPBR is an electronic journal. Its readers receive the reviews automatically in their email box upon publication. The Section has a membership of almost 900; and presently sends The Review to over 1000 readers in more than a dozen countries. The electronic medium allows LPBR to review almost every book about the legal process and politics, to do longer reviews than are usually published, and to make the reviews available within six months of the receipt of the book or sooner.

Section 5 Political Organizations and Parties (POP) $5

The Organized Section on Political Organizations and Parties works to further scholarship on American political parties, comparative political parties, and interest groups. We do this in a number of different ways. Through our meetings, workshops, newsletter, and a website, we provide a means of interaction and communication for like-minded scholars. At our annual workshop at the APSA conference, we work to train scholars in the use of various methods or databases, and to promote new research in a particular area. Our participation through the Sections mechanism of the American Political Science Association allows us to be a "voice for our members" interests within APSA. We also organize the panels in our subfields for the annual APSA conference. Finally we recognize excellence in scholarship with our awards for best book, best article, career achievement, and emerging scholar. We are governed by the volunteer efforts of our officers and board. The incumbents below and on the POP web site and all of us want to encourage POP members to let us know what is on your mind. We're eager to reach out in new directions so let us hear your ideas!

Section 9 Presidency Research Group $10

The Presidency Research Group (PRG) is the premier association of scholars devoted to the study of the presidency and executives. To that end, it welcomes diverse theoretical perspectives, analytical techniques, and data sources as they contribute to the advancement of scholarship and teaching. It also invites the contributions and perspectives of other disciplines. The PRG values the establishment and enhancement of non-partisan links between scholarship, the real world of presidential and executive politics, and public policy.

To advance these goals, the PRG organizes presidency-related panels and conferences. It has also implemented such programs as: the White House 2001 Project, where presidency scholars prepared papers and publications on the functioning of key White House offices to both facilitate presidential transitions for new administrations and to advance scholarship on transitions; the Presidency Research Fellowship program, to provide support for scholars in need of a workplace in Washington, D.C.; a junior faculty mentoring program, which has successfully paired new faculty with more senior presidency scholars to assist in the former's professional development; enhancement of research opportunities at presidential libraries and the National Archives; annual presentation of awards to recognize outstanding scholarship; and semi-annual publication of its newsletter, the PRG REPORT, which covers recent scholarship, teaching strategies, and PRG news.

The Section web site, PRG*Net,* is a service of the Presidency Research Group and is available at <sunsite.unc.edu/lia/prgnet >. It is intended to speed the transfer of information about the presidency and to improve the circulation of research materials on the presidency. Services include an electronic conference center planned to create real time conferences, research materials, including copies of papers, and standard research materials on the presidency. Membership in the PRG includes a subscription to PRG Report, the group's newsletter. You can contact the PRG at <PRGNet@unc.edu>.

Section 10 Political Methodology $25

The purpose of this Section is to provide members with an interest in methodology, including research design, measurement, and statistics, opportunities to meet and exchange ideas.

The home page of the Society for Political Methodology, the Political Methodology Section of the APSA is located at <web.polmeth.ufl.edu>, and it is the central web site for the political methodology community. The primary purpose of this site is to serve as the gateway to the Electronic Paper Archive. From here you can view abstracts of conference and Working Papers online and download papers for local printing. This is also the gateway to The Political Methodologist, our newsletter, and Political Analysis, the official journal of the section.

Much of the work we do relies upon the use of mathematical and statistical software, so this site also includes links to useful computing resources. Political methodology focuses on the analysis of empirical data, so we also provide replication data sets and example data sets from published and unpublished work on the Research and Teaching page. The Section Activities page includes additional useful information about the Society such as officers, events, announcements about upcoming events, and other useful information such as local groups, travel links, awards, and polmeth in the news. There is also a Conference page with information about conferences in political science and other disciplines that are of interest to section members.

We have a new initiative to collect and store links to Individual Syllabi that are oriented around political methodology (broadly defined). The goal is to provide a new resource where visitors to this site can browse a wide range of syllabi in quantitative political science, research methods, and other closely related areas of interest. This page also has instructions if you would like to link your class syllabus and become part of the project.

Section 17 Foundations of Political Thought $8

The Foundations of Political Theory Section exists to advance the linkage of political theory and philosophy with political science as a discipline. Foundations recognizes and encourages research and teaching that crosses intellectual and disciplinary boundaries. It stands at and seeks to support the intersection where philosophical, psychological, normative, and empirical approaches and problems meet. Foundations, as the name suggests, aims to study the more permanent dimensions of political life ranging from the design of institutions and political practices to the terms and concepts used to interpret the former.

At the Foundations web site, you will find information about the section, including its officers, its newsletter, and a 'bookstore' where you can browse past and new titles in political theory. One new feature is a listing of job opportunities for political theorists and recent placements. If you are not already a member of the section, we hope that you will join us. The Section web site is at <www.political-theory.org>.

Section 26, Ecological and Transformational Politics $5

The Organized Section on Ecological and Transformational Politics (OSETP) of APSA supports teaching, research, and praxis in the areas of political ecology, participatory democracy, social justice, policies and practices of inclusiveness, conflict resolution, human growth, and dialogue on the meaning of transformation.

This Section is committing to sustaining a form of politics and political science that is directly engaged in addressing fundamental problems of our age--such as class inequality, ecological destruction, political authoritarianism, and closed systems of elite rule and reasoning, both in our politics and in our academic discipline. The OSETP brings a range of innovative activites to the annual conferences of the APSA, including annual, inner-city walking tours, recreational and educational excursions to acclaimed sites near the APSA conference host-cities (e.g., ecological tours of wild areas, architectural tours, canoe trips), and evening support groups to celebrate and support the work of progressive political scientists. The OSETP brings important speakers such as Ralph Nader and William Domhoff to the APSA, and in 2001 we will be featuring a panel of political scientists turned politicians--these experts in praxis will offer their insights on the transition and its consequences.

The OSETP welcomes innovative, alternative, and progressive scholars to our work, and especially invites younger scholars to join the section, shape its future, and play a leadership role. We are also committed to building connections with such important and unique APSA sections as New Political Science, Undergraduate Education, and Human Rights.

Section 30 Politics and Literature $5

The study of literature offers political scientists a particularly stimulating mode of inquiry into political institutions and principles, and into the ways of life that sustain them and are, in turn, shaped by them. Indeed, the creation of this division is itself a sign of the complex and changing landscape of the study of politics. The Section explores the way in which literature—broadly understood to include diverse literary genres as well as film—provides unique insights into the nature of political life and the study of politics.
