Contributors

Warwick P. Anderson is Head of the Department of Physiology at Monash University in Victoria, Australia. He has been chairman of the NHMRC (National Health & Medical Research Council of Australia) Research Committee since 1997. From 1985 to 1994 he was Chairman of the inaugural Animal Welfare Committee of the NHMRC. His research interests are in the causes of high blood pressure.

Kenneth M. Boyd, M.A., B.D., Ph.D., is Senior Lecturer in Medical Ethics, Edinburgh University Medical School, Research Director of the Institute of Medical Ethics, and Associate Minister of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Princes Street, Edinburgh, Scotland.

David A. Buehler, M.Div., M.A., is founder of Bioethika Online Publishers and also serves as Chaplain to the University Lutheran Ministry of Providence, Rhode Island.

Paul Carrick, Ph.D., teaches philosophy at Pennsylvania State University and Gettysburg College. He is director of the Honors Program at Harrisburg Area Community College, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

David DeGrazia, Ph.D., is Associate Professor of Philosophy at George Washington University. He is author of Taking Animals Seriously (Cambridge University Press, 1996). His current research focus is on personal identity and bioethics.

Alan M. Goldberg, Ph.D., is Professor and Director of the Center for Alternatives to Animal Testing, School of Hygiene and Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland.

Richard N. Hill, M.D., Ph.D., is a science advisor to the Assistant Administrator in the Office of Prevention, Pesticides and Toxic Substances at the Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C.

Kenneth V. Iserson, M.D., M.B.A., is Professor of Surgery (Emergency Medicine), Director of the Program in Bioethics, and Chair of the Bioethics Committee at the University of Arizona College of Medicine, Tucson.

Andrew Jameton, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor and Section Head, Section on Humanities and Law, Department of Preventive and Societal Medicine, University of Nebraska Medical Center, Omaha.

Christina Kerby, M.P.A., M.A., is a Project Coordinator in the Section on Humanities and Law in the Department of Preventive and Societal Medicine at the University of Nebraska Medical Center's College of Medicine, Omaha.

Cambridge Quarterly of Healthcare Ethics (1999), 8, 6–7. Printed in the USA.
Copyright © 1999 Cambridge University Press 0963-1801/99 $12.50

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0963180199801030 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Arlene Judith Klotzko, J.D., is a healthcare attorney and a writer on medical ethics topics. She is visiting scholar at the Center for Bioethics, University of Pennsylvania, as well as a research fellow at both the Institute of Medical Ethics, Edinburgh, and the Department of Ethics and Philosophy, Faculty of Theology, Utrecht University, The Netherlands. She is currently writing and editing books on cloning for Oxford University Press.

Lyle Munro, B.A., Litt.B., M.A., teaches sociology in the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at Monash University, Gippsland. He is currently completing a book, Compassionate Beasts: The Quest for Animal Rights, which examines the long history of animal liberation campaigns in Australia, the United Kingdom, and the United States.

Michael A. Perry is an Associate Professor in the School of Physiology & Pharmacology at the University of New South Wales, Australia. He was Chairman of the NHMRC (National Health & Medical Research Council of Australia) Animal Welfare Committee from 1994 to 1997. His research interests are in gastrointestinal microcirculation and the reasons why certain pain-relieving drugs disrupt these tissues.

Jessica Pierce, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor in the Section on Humanities and Law in the Department of Preventive and Societal Medicine at the University of Nebraska Medical Center's College of Medicine, Omaha.

Richard D. Ryder, Ph.D., is Director of Animal Welfare Studies for the International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW), originator of the concepts of "speciesism" and "painism," and the author of many books and papers on ethics and animal protection.

Jerald Silverman, D.V.M., is Professor of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine and Director of the Master of Laboratory Animal Science program at Allegheny University of the Health Sciences, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Peter Singer is a professor in the Centre for Human Bioethics, Monash University, Clayton, Australia. From July 1999 he will be De Camp Professor of Bioethics at Princeton University. His books include Animal Liberation, Practical Ethics, How Are We to Live? and Rethinking Life and Death.

William S. Stokes, D.V.M., is Associate Director for the Animal and Alternative Resources Environmental Toxicology Program, at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, Research Triangle Park, North Carolina.

Helen Watt, Ph.D., is a Research Fellow at the Linacre Centre for Health Care Ethics in London, England.

Paul Root Wolpe, Ph.D., is a Faculty Associate at the Center for Bioethics of the University of Pennsylvania, where he also serves on the faculties of the Department of Psychiatry, Department of Sociology, and the Leonard Davis Institute of Health Economics. He is also a closet genre novel writer.

Joanne Zurlo, Ph.D., is Associate Director of the Center for Alternatives to Animal Testing, School of Hygiene and Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0963180199801030 Published online by Cambridge University Press