Notes on Contributors

Glen O'Hara is Lecturer in Modern History at New College, Oxford. He is the co-author, with Niall Ferguson, of 'The Myth of the Feelgood Factor', in N. Ferguson, The Cash Nexus: Money and Power in the Modern World Since 1700 (London, 2001). He is currently working on a book on British economic and social planning in the 1960s.

Tom Buchanan is University Lecturer in Modern History and Politics at the University of Oxford's Department for Continuing Education, and a Fellow of Kellogg College. His publications include The Spanish Civil War and the British Labour Movement (Cambridge, 1991) and Britain and the Spanish Civil War (Cambridge, 1997). He is currently researching a book on China and the British left in the twentieth century.

Michael A. Spurr currently lectures in history at Monmouth University, Australia, and is preparing a book treating the British Union of Fascists as a social and cultural movement. He is also undertaking a Ph.D. examining the intellectual interaction between interwar facism and neo-conservativism by exploring the theme of a crisis of civilisation.

Stuart Woolf is Professor of Contemporary History at the University of Venice. His books include Napoleon's Integration of Europe (London, 1991) and Nationalism in Europe, 1815 to the Present. A Reader (London, 1996).

Richard Vinen teaches history at King's College, London. His most recent book is A History in Fragments: Europe in the twentieth century (London, 2000).

Pierre-Cyrille Hautcoeur is a Professor at the University of Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne, and a member of the 'Delta' research unit (CNRS-EHESS-ENS). His interests lie in the financial and monetary history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. He is co-editor with G. Gallais-Hamonno of Trois siècles de marchés financiers français, a three-volume set published by the Comité pour l'histoire économique et financière de la France.

Contemporary European History, 12, 3 (2003), pp. 385–386 © 2003 Cambridge University Press
DOI: 10.1017/S0960777303001309 Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777303001309 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Emmanuelle Loyer is maitre de conferences in the history department of the University Lille III, and currently occupies a research position at the Centre d'Etudes Nord Américaines (Ecole des hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales/Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique). Her most recent publication, drawing from her research into the history of culture, is 'La Voix de l'Amérique. Un outil de la propagande américaine aux mains d'intellectuels français', Vingtième Siècle (octobre–décembre 2002). She is currently completing a book on exiled French intellectuals during the Second World War.

Maud Bracke is a researcher at the European University Institute, Department of History and Civilisation and is completing a Ph.D. on west European communism, internationalism and the Czechoslovak crisis of 1968–9. Her publications include 'The Czechoslovak Crisis, the Left in Western Europe, Revolution and Reform', Soundings (June 2003).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777303001309 Published online by Cambridge University Press