CONTRIBUTORS

GAUTAM BASU THAKUR is assistant professor of English at Boise State University (and an avid, though not unconditional, reader of Slavoj Žižek!). His teaching and research interests include postcolonial studies, critical theory, and British literature of the Empire. His articles and reviews have appeared or are forthcoming in venues such as Psychoanalysis, Culture & Society, New Cinemas: Journal of Contemporary Film, and Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net, and in the anthologies The Literary Lacan: From Literature to Lituraterre and Beyond, Bollywood and Globalization: Indian Popular Cinema, Nation, and Diaspora, and Figurations in Indian Film.

DUŠAN I. BJELIĆ is professor of Criminology at the University of Southern Maine. He coedited the book Balkan as Metaphor: Between Globalization and Fragmentation (MIT Press, 2002). He is also the author of Galileo's Pendulum: Science, Sexuality and the Body-Instrument Link (State University of New York Press, 2003) and Normalizing the Balkans: Geopolitics of Psychoanalysis and Psychiatry (Ashgate, 2011). He is currently examining the history of Bulgarian Zionism and the colonization of Palestine.

KATHRYN HENDLEY is William Voss-Bascom Professor of Law and Political Science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her research focuses on legal reform in post-Soviet Russia, with a particular emphasis on how ordinary citizens and firms experience law.

SEAN HOMER is associate professor in Writing and Literature at the American University in Bulgaria. He is author of Fredric Jameson: Marxism, Hermeneutics, Postmodernism (1998) and Jacques Lacan (2005). He is coeditor (with Douglas Kellner) of Fredric Jameson: A Critical Reader (2004) and (with Ruth Parkin-Gounelas and Yannis Stavrakakis) of Objects: Material, Psychic, Aesthetic, a special issue of Gramma: Journal of Theory and Criticism 14 (2006). His most recent publications have been on contemporary Balkan cinema and politics.

STEFAN B. KIRMSE is a postdoctoral research fellow at Humboldt University of Berlin affiliated with the Department of East European History and the interdisciplinary research program Legal Cultures at the Institute for Advanced Study in Berlin. His research focuses on the everyday lives of Muslims in the Eurasian space. He is the editor of Youth in the Former Soviet South: Everyday Lives between Experimentation and Regulation (2011) and the volume One Law for All?: Western Models and Local Practices in (Post-)Imperial Contexts (2012), a comparative historical analysis of legal reforms and everyday litigation in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. He recently published the research monograph Youth and Globalization in Central Asia: Everyday Life between Religion, Media, and International Donors (2013). His current book project, Law and Empire in Late Tsarist Russia, explores the everyday experience of law in nineteenth-century Crimea and Kazan.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0037677900022816 Published online by Cambridge University Press

JULIA LERNER is a faculty member in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, and a research fellow at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute. Her research interests are in the anthropology of knowledge and the sociology of migration; at the intersection of these fields she explores the relocation of people and the translation of ideas. Her publications deal with cultural change in both post-Soviet Russia and the Russian-speaking collective in Israel.

MARIO SLUGAN is a graduate student in the Department of Cinema and Media Studies at the University of Chicago. He has published on Balkanism in Emir Kusturica's oeuvre, on skepticism in Ridley Scott's Blade Runner, and on the question of narrative voice in fiction film and literature. His current research includes the status of deixis in fiction and its importance for narratology, and the history of supplementary narration in silent film.

PATRICIA K. THURSTON is team leader of the Specialty Cataloging Team at Sterling Memorial Library, Yale University. She has been compiling the annual dissertations list for Slavic Review since 1997. In addition, she has written about collections of Romanian materials in research libraries in the United States. Her current work includes efforts to encourage the implementation of non-Latin scripts used in Russia, Central Asia, and other parts of the world in local and national cataloging environments.

CLAUDIA ZBENOVICH received her PhD in Slavic Studies from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 2003. She is a senior lecturer at Hadassah College in Jerusalem. Her scholarly interests are cross-cultural communication, argumentation, and dialogical interaction. Her publications include works on Russian language in immigration, language and politics, child-rearing discourse, and media discourse.

SLAVOJ ŽIŽEK, Hegelian philosopher, Lacanian psychoanalyst, and communist political activist, is a researcher in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Ljubljana and Co-Director of the Birkbeck Institute for the Humanities at Birkbeck College, University of London. His latest publications include Less Than Nothing: Hegel and the Shadow of Dialectical Materialism (Verso Books, 2012), The Year of Dreaming Dangerously (Verso Books, 2012), and Wagner and Consequences, a special issue of Lacanian Ink 41/42 (2013). His forthcoming publications include The Žižek Jokes (MIT Press), Event (Penguin Books), and Absolute Recoil (Northwestern University Press).

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0037677900022816 Published online by Cambridge University Press