INTERNATIONAL LEGAL MATERIALS

FEATURING:

Africa: Second Summit of the International Conference on Great Lakes Region: Pact on Security, Stability and Development in the Great Lakes Region
In which the Presidents of the nations of the Great Lakes region agree to create a framework governing the relations between member states; implement the Dar-es-Salaam Declaration, and produce an environment of security, stability, and sustainable development between member states.

International Court of Justice: Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro
In which the ICJ held, by a vote of 13 to 2, that Serbia had not committed genocide in violation of its obligations under the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. By a vote of 12 to 3 the Court found that Serbia had nevertheless violated its obligation to prevent the crime of genocide pursuant to Article I of the Convention.

311
International Court of Justice: Pulp Mills on the River Uruguay (Argentina v. Uruguay)
In which the ICJ held by a vote of 14 to 1 that the current circumstances do not warrant it to exercise its powers of provisional measures pursuant to Article 41 of the Court's statute.

337
International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes: World Duty Free v. Kenya
In which the Tribunal held that a payment made to former Kenyan President Arap Moi to obtain a contract was a bribe, and thus rendered the agreement a voidable one that ICSID would not enforce.

Israel Supreme Court: Public Committee against Torture v. Israel
In which the Israeli Supreme Court held that targeted killings are not always illegal, but must be examined in the context of the law of armed conflict and with respect to the international law norm of proportionality.

Henry J. Hyde United States India Peaceful Atomic Energy Cooperation Act of 2006
In which the U.S. commits to obtain India's cooperation in the Proliferation Security Initiative and requires the President to submit a report to Congress requesting Congressional approval before waiving certain requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954.

updated to include instalment 11, December 2006.

This four-volume loose-leaf, first published in 1991, presents a comprehensive collection of basic legal documents on space law. It is an essential reference and research tool for all those involved in the formulation, implementation and operation of space law and policy. Its loose-leaf format ensures that the material is kept fully up-to-date.

An online version is now available free of charge to the subscribers of this work. The online version is updated on an ongoing basis and features full searchability, a linked table of contents as well as bookmarked sections to ensure that the desired section can be quickly found.

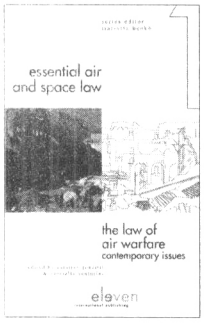

Essentials in Air and Space Law

series editor: Marietta Benkö

Our New Book Series entitled "Essential Air and Space Law" (EASL) aims to establish a collection of prominent studies in this particular field of law especially for experienced practitioners (e.g. lawyers, policy makers in governments, national and international organisations and private entities), and to scholars involved in the research and study of air traffic and space law.

The series is a useful source of information for technical experts that familiarizes its readers with the legal aspects and implications of international air transport (e.g. questions of liability for air traffic accidents, the loss of and damage to air cargo, air traffic control, protection against aircraft noise, etc.), and the exploration or use of outer space (e.g. usage of remote sensing imagery of the Earth for commercial purposes and data protection).

NEW EDITION

Law, Ethics and the Visual Arts

Fifth Edition

John H. Merryman and Stephen K. Urice

No legal scholar has been as passionate and articulate about the visual arts as John Henry Merryman. This new book, the Fifth Edition of his classic Law, Ethics and the Visual Arts, revised in collaboration with Stephen K. Urice, incorporates razor-sharp insights into numerous developments that have occurred in recent years, from the widespread bomb damage of the nineties to such specialized agreements as the UNESCO Convention on Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage. As readers have come to expect from earlier editions, historical underpinnings and patterns are clearly traced for every issue raised.

These issues include:

- "military necessity" as justification for destruction
- ugly, obscene, or offensive artworks as "free speech"
- fakes and forgeries
- the inner workings of art auctions
- laws relating to art crimes: who do they protect?
- trade in antiquities

A documentary appendix presents the texts of 23 relevant laws, conventions, treaties, declarations, resolutions, guidelines, codes professional practice, and the terms and conditions of sale of major art auction houses.

Although the last decade has witnessed more than a few episodes of shocking cultural destruction, Merryman and Urice note a great surge in worldwide consciousness of the unique, irreplaceable character of art, and a significant rollback of the cultural prejudices that have been ebbing away since the 1954 Hague Convention declared all art works, whatever their origin, to be "the cultural heritage of mankind."

Whether you need to understand something as provocative as who owns the past, or something as mundane as whether a museum can sell part of its collection in order to fix the roof, this book will set you on the right course. It combines unassailable scholarship with a deeply humanistic approach, recognizing that law and art each (in the words of Paul Freund) "impose a measure of order on the disorder of experience without stifling the underlying diversity, spontaneity, and disarray."

Table of Contents

1. Plunder, Reparations and Destruction
2. The International Trade In Art
3. Who Owns the Past?
4. Repatriation of Cultural Property
5. The Artist's Rights in the Work of Art
6. Artistic Freedom
7. The Artist's Life

Foreword

As we begin the Society's second century and contemplate the "Future of International Law" — this year's ASIL Annual Meeting theme — it is natural to reconsider our longstanding traditions, activities, and publications. Do they make sense in a new era?

International Legal Materials is no exception. From its beginning, the Society established as one of its primary functions the regular collection, publication, and dissemination of important international legal materials. These materials were first published as a section of the American Journal of International Law, and since the 1960s as the current stand-alone International Legal Materials publication. The publication met a critical need in that earlier era — when access to primary source legal materials was limited.

Today, access to information is no longer a problem. Indeed, our challenge is too much information. And therein we find a continuing mission for International Legal Materials. The dramatic growth in the international legal field makes it nearly impossible for scholars and practitioners — let alone the general public — to keep abreast of the most important international legal developments. Fortunately they can rely on our staff and Editorial Advisory Committee to sift through the vast array of documents, identify those that are truly significant, and highlight them in International Legal Materials and our bi-monthly electronic bulletin, International Law in Brief. Increasingly, we are publishing these primary source materials along with an introductory note that puts the document in context and explains its significance. The Society's periodic ASIL Insights provide additional analysis of particularly high-profile developments.

In this way, International Legal Materials and its companion publications remain as valuable today as they were one hundred years ago. We are committed to continuing to develop these resources to meet the evolving needs of the international legal community.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Andersen

Note from the Managing Editor

In this volume of International Legal Materials, the reader will note a concerted effort to increase the "intellectual content" of the publication by including a greater number of "Introductory Notes" to place the primary legal source materials in context. We are aware of the changing nature and availability of international legal documents, with more documents readily available on the Internet. This is quite a change from the relative difficulty of obtaining international legal documents when the American Society of International Law first published International Legal Materials in 1962.

The documents that appear in this volume reflect the variety and complexity of international law of our day. The Pact on Security and Stability in the Great Lakes Region concluded in December 2006, and which is now open for ratification, represents the efforts of the Presidents of the "Great Lakes" region of Africa to navigate important aspects of their relations, including peace and security, stability, sustainable development, and humanitarian, social, and environmental issues. The International Court of Justice case Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro, is a seminal one, and likely to generate numerous law review articles for years to come. The International Court of Justice case Pulp Mills on the River Uruguay concerns the key South American nations Argentina and Uruguay and their dispute over control over portions of the River Uruguay. The International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes decision, World Duty Free v. Kenya, discusses an area of growing international concern and jurisprudence, official corruption. The Israeli Supreme Court decision was the last that A. Barak, the former President of the court, penned before leaving the bench, and it discusses the crucial concept of proportionality in the law of war context. The Henry J. Hyde United States and India Peaceful Atomic Energy Cooperation Act of 2006 represents an important development in the nuclear non-proliferation field.

Statement of Editorial Policy

International Legal Materials is a core publication of The American Society of International Law that reproduces texts of documents reflecting the broad scope and evolution of international law. The range of covered subjects has expanded from traditional topics such as international organizations, jurisdiction, and international trade to include developments in fields such as intellectual property, environmental law, nuclear non-proliferation, human rights, and international criminal law.

International Legal Materials serves as both a bi-monthly information service and a widely recognized archive of international law documents for a diverse, global community of legal scholars, government officials, private practitioners and institutions sharing a common interest in international law. To meet the varied demands of such a readership, documents are selected from world-wide sources on the basis of their present and future legal significance.

International Legal Materials is prepared for publication in Washington, D.C. with both the advice of the Editorial Advisory Committee and the assistance of Corresponding Editors around the world. In order to reproduce the texts of selected documents under tight production schedules, the best available source is used, whether electronic or printed.

Guidelines for Submission of Documents

The ILM Office welcomes any effort to bring suitable documents to the Office's attention. Electronic files or web links are required for publication, although printed texts can be used for initial deliberations regarding republication.

The authenticity (i.e. official version status) of submitted documents must be easily verifiable. This is facilitated by submitting files or print versions which are clearly attributable to the original source, or by providing links to documents on the original source's official website.

If the official version of a document is not available in English, an unofficial translation is acceptable. The original text must accompany such a translation.

Introductory Notes

Introductory Notes are brief articles from one to three pages in length which are intended to provide background information for a document reproduced in ILM.

For example, an Introductory Note for a treaty might include a short history of the negotiations, the dates of signature and entry into force. An Introductory Note for legislation would give its history and international significance, while one for judicial proceedings would provide the background of the case.

The views of authors in Introductory Notes are their own and do not necessarily reflect those of either the American Society of International Law or the Managing Editor.

Acceptance of Materials and Corrections

Print submissions cannot be returned. Translators and others submitting material will be notified of the acceptance of their document for publication.

Once a translation or Introductory Note has been accepted for reproduction, The American Society of International Law will send a publication agreement to the author.

Translators and Introductory Note Authors shall be acknowledged in International Legal Materials.

In some cases minor editorial or typographical alterations may be made without contacting the author or translator. Major corrections will be sent to the author or translator for approval. Corrected Introductory Notes or translations must be returned within the time specified.

International Law In Brief

The Attorney-Editors of International Legal Materials also publish the e-mail newsletter International Law In Brief, which contains objective abstracts of recently released documents pertinent to international law.

Documents abstracted in International Law In Brief are later considered for reproduction in International Legal Materials.

A complete International Law In Brief archive is located at The American Society of International Law website (http://www.asil.org). A search engine provides an easy way to find abstracts of specific documents.

The International Law In Brief publication is free, but has an independent subscription.
