Notes on Contributors

Luc Capdevila is a researcher at CRHISCO-CNRS at the Université Rennes2 and a member of the IHTP-CNRS. He is the author of numerous articles on gender and the experience of defeat, occupation and liberation in France, including 'Le mythe du guerrier et la construction sociale d'un ''éternel masculin'' après la guerre', Revue Française de Psychanalyse, 2 (1998), 'Violence et société en Bretagne dans l'après-Libération (automne 1944–automne 1945)', Modern and Contemporary France 7 (1999) and 'La mobilisation des femmes dans la France combattante (1940–1945)', Clio 12 (2000).

Denise Z. Davidson is Assistant Professor in the Department of History, Georgia State University. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1997 and is currently preparing her thesis, on culture, identity and urban life after the French Revolution, for publication.

Barton C. Hacker is Curator of Armed Forces History Collections at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution. He is currently working with Margaret Vining on a book-length study, tentatively entitled 'Cutting a New Pattern: Women and Military Mobilisation since the French Revolution'.

Elizabeth Harvey is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Liverpool. She is the author of Youth and the Welfare State in Weimar Germany (1993) and co-editor (with Lynn Abrams) of Gender Relations in German History: Power, Agency and Experience from the Sixteenth to the Twentieth Century (1996). She is currently working on women and the Nazi Germanisation of the 'East'.

Jeffrey Herf is Professor in the Department of History at the University of Maryland, where he teaches modern European political and intellectual history. His publications include: Divided Memory: The Nazi Past in the Two Germanys (1997; published in German as Zweierlei Erinnerung: die NS Vergangenheit im geteilten Deutschland, 1998). Divided Memory was awarded the American Historical Association's George Louis Beer Prize for 1998 and was co-winner of the Fraenkel Prize in Contemporary History in 1996. He is also the author of War by other Means: Soviet Power,

Contemporary European History, 10, 3 (2001), pp. 537–539 © 2001 Cambridge University Press
DOI:10.1017/S0960777301003125 Printed in the United Kingdom

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777301003125 Published online by Cambridge University Press

West German Resistance and the Battle of the Euromissiles (1991) and Reactionary Modernism: Technology, Culture and Politics in Weimar and the Third Reich (1984). He is currently at work on 'The big switch: Communism, the Jews and the West in German political culture in the Nazi era and in the Cold War'.

Katherine Jolluck is Acting Associate Professor in the Department of History, Stanford University. She is currently finishing a larger study of the experiences of Polish women forcibly exiled to the interior of the USSR during the Second World War. It will be published by the University of Pittsburgh Press under the title, 'Gender, Nation and Survival in Exile: Poles in the Soviet Union during World War II'.

Ethan Pollock received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. His dissertation, 'The Politics of Knowledge: Party Ideology and Soviet Science, 1945–1953', examines the interactions between Communist Party leaders and Soviet scientists working in six different disciplines in the years between the end of the Second World War and Stalin's death. He is currently a postdoctoral fellow in the Centre for the History of Recent Science at the George Washington University, where he is also research associate in the Institute for European, Russian and Eurasian Studies.

Margaret Poulos Anagnostopoulou is a doctoral student at the University of Sydney currently working in Athens. Her Ph.D. thesis is entitled 'Arms and the Woman: National Liberation Wars and Greek Feminist Identity', and she has published on women partisans in the Greek Civil War, most recently in 'Gender, Civil War and National Identity', Australian Journal of Politics and History, Vol. 46 (2000).

Michael Richards is Lecturer in History at the University of the West of England. His book, A Time of Silence: Civil War and the Culture of Repression in Franco's Spain, 1936–45 (1998) was co-winner of the History Today/Longman prize for 1998. He is currently working on epidemics and the concept of social medicine in post-Civil War Spain, socialisation and children's camps in the 1940s, and housing policy and health during the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera in the 1920s.

Jo Vellacott is the author of From Liberal to Labour with Women's Suffrage: the Story of Catherine Marshall (1993) as well as numerous articles on feminism and the international peace movement. Now retired from teaching, she is Honorary Fellow of the Simone de Beauvoir Institute, Concordia University, Montréal, and is currently working on the second part of her life of Catherine Marshall.

Mary Vincent is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Sheffield and Editor of Contemporary European History. She is the author of Catholicism in the Second Republic: Religion and Politics in Salamanca, 1930–36 (1996) and editor, with Robert Shoemaker, of Gender and History in Western Europe (1998). She is starting work on a study of the Francoist 'Crusade'.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777301003125 Published online by Cambridge University Press

Margaret Vining is Museum Curatorial Specialist, Armed Forces History Collections at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution. She is currently working with Barton Hacker on a book-length study of women and military mobilisation since the French Revolution.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0960777301003125 Published online by Cambridge University Press