THE CONTRIBUTORS

Timothy Frye is the Marshall D. Shulman Professor of Post-Soviet Foreign Policy and director of the Harriman Institute at Columbia University; he is also the research director of the International Center for the Study of Institutions and Development at the Higher School of Economics in Moscow. He is currently finishing a book on property rights in Russia. He can be reached at tmf2@columbia.edu.

Ora John Reuter is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, and a senior researcher at the International Center for the Study of Institutions and Development at the Higher School of Economics in Moscow. He is currently completing a book manuscript on dominant parties in authoritarian regimes. He can be reached at reutero@uwm.edu.

David Szakonyi is a Ph.D. candidate in political science at Columbia University and a researcher at the International Center for the Study of Institutions and Development at the Higher School of Economics in Moscow who works on business-state relations. He can be reached at ds2875@columbia.edu.

Rafaela M. Dancygier is an assistant professor in the Department of Politics and the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University. Her broad research interests are in comparative politics, with a focus on the implications of ethnic diversity in advanced democracies. Her work has examined the domestic consequences of international immigration, the political incorporation and electoral representation of immigrant-origin minorities, and the determinants of ethnic conflict. She is the author of Immigration and Conflict in Europe (2010) and various articles on topics of immigration and immigrants. She can be reached at rdancygi@princeton.edu.

Alex Street is a research fellow at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity, in Göttingen, Germany. He studies political inclusion and exclusion, focusing mainly on immigrants and their offspring in Europe and North America. He is currently completing a book on family ties as the basis of citizenship. He can be reached at street@mmg.mpg.de.

Ryan S. Jablonski is an assistant professor of political science at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He studies the influence of foreign aid and other international capital on domestic politics. He can be reached at r.s.jablonski@lse.ac.uk.

Henry Farrell is an associate professor of political science and international affairs at George Washington University. He is currently working on the application of evolutionary theory to institutional change. He can be reached at henry.farrell@gmail.com.

Abraham L. Newman is an associate professor at the BMW Center for German and European Studies in the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University. His research focuses on the international politics of regulation and he is the author of Protectors of Privacy: Regulating Personal Data in the Global Economy (2008) and the coeditor, with John Zysman, of How Revolutionary Was the Digital Revolution (2006). He can be reached at aln24@georgetown.edu; and for more information, see http://explore.georgetown.edu/people/aln24/.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S0043887114000069 Published online by Cambridge University Press