FOREWORD

EVERY subscriber will receive a present of the Catalogue of the Onodi Collection with this issue of the Journal.

It will be within the recollection of many that at the end of the Great War the financial situation in Austria-Hungary made it necessary that this unique collection, which had taken Professor Onodi of Budapest many years to form, should be sold. It was brought to England and was purchased by a number of British laryngologists and presented by them to the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The classification and description of the specimens and the selection of those from which plates have been made has been done by Mr. Layton, who has devoted a great deal of time and care to it, and the greatest credit is due to him for his admirable work. The printing and production has been excellently done for the Royal College of Surgeons by our publishers, Messrs. Headley Brothers, and the result is a volume which should be a valuable and useful possession, not only for purposes of reference, but also for teaching. In presenting it to their subscribers the Directors of the Journal feel sure that it will fulfil its purpose in very many ways.
