and political economy. She has been a member of APSA since 1973.

Rogers Smith, Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Political Science, University of Pennsylvania. He is currently serving on the Program Committee of the 2002 Annual Meeting and in the past has served on the Edward S. Corwin Award Committee (1990). His areas of interests are public law, American political thought, and political theory. He has been a member of APSA since 1981.

Michael Wallerstein, professor of political science, Northwestern University. He received his PhD at the University of Chicago, and then taught at UCLA before moving to Northwestern. Wallerstein studies Western European politics and, more generally, develops models of the dynamics of labor organization, wage-setting, and redistributive politics in advanced industrial capitalist democracies. He has served on the APSA Council (1997-99) and on the Election Committee (1998-99).

A Look at the Post- 9/11 World

As part of the Association's online look at the events of September 11, PS has added three web-only articles that address the Post-9/11 world. They are available at www.apsanet.org/PS

What Political Science Owes the World
Larry Diamond,
The Hoover Institution

The Changing Leadership of George W. Bush: A Pre- and Post-9/11 Comparison
Fred Greenstein,
Princeton University

The New Realism in American Foreign Policy
Quee-Young Kim,
University of Wyoming

Linda Lopez joins APSA; Sue Davis moves to Denison University

Linda Lopez has joined APSA as a staff political scientist and program director. Lopez leaves Chapman University inCalifornia where she served on the political scence faculty as an assistant professor. Lopez is an active scholar, teacher, and academic administrator. Her scholarly interests include attention to the interface of racial and ethnic politics and public policy making, especially related to law and public policy. She has most recently been director of the Legal Studies Program at Chapman, and is currently a member of APSA's Committee on the Status of Latinos y Latinas in the Profession. Lopez received her Ph.D. from the University of Southern California in 1999.

At APSA, Lopez assumes leadership responsibilities for a cluster of activities related to issues of professional community. These include enhancing professional development of political scientists and supporting successful career development, and advancing the political science community, gathering, analyzing and disseminating information about the field, and coordinating constituent organizations. She is now our primary point of contact with organized sections, with the status committees, with graduate students, with small research grants, and with minority initiatives including the Ralph Bunche Summer Institute.

Sue Davis, in turn, wrapped up her term at APSA at the end of July and has joined the faculty at at Denison University. Davis had been with APSA for 3 years, and had made significant contributions in development of minority initiatives, in support of the status committees, coordination of organized sections, and many other areas. APSA will miss her engaging and enthusiastic manner and her creative impulses in moving APSA programs ahead, and we wish her well in her return to the classroom.

Hochschild Names Associate Editors for Perspectives

Jennifer Hochschild, inaugural editor of APSA's new journal, Perspectives on Politics, has named her five Associate Editors. Those named as Associate Editors are:

Henry Brady, University of California, Irvine
William Galston, University of Maryland
Atul Kohli, Princeton University
Paula McClain, Duke University
Jack Snyder, Columbia University

These Associate Editors will assist Hochschild in identifying and developing materials for the new journal, which will be of broad interest across subfields and will synthesize and extend a body of significant reserach or conceptual/ theoretical developments.

For more about Jennifer Hochschild's plans for Perspectives on Politics, visit the APSA web site <www.apsanet.org/perspectives>.

PS Now Available Via JSTOR

PS: Political Science and Politics is now available in the JSTOR Archive of scholarly journals as part of JSTOR's Arts & Sciences II Collection. This multi-disciplinary collection contains titles and disciplines that complement those in the Arts & Sciences I Collection.

JSTOR now provides PS readers with access to the journal reaching back to its inception in 1968. Following APSA policy, a three year window on current issues will be in place, meaning that the most recent issue on JSTOR will be 1998.

When completed in 2002, the Arts & Sciences II Collection will offer at least 100 titles in disciplines such as History, Economics, and Asian Studies and will offer core titles in new disciplines including African Studies, Geography, History of Science, Latin American Studies, Slavic Studies, and Middle Eastern Studies.

APSA members can purchase access to APSA journals on JSTOR for a modest annual subscription fee.

https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049096502000975 Published online by Cambridge University Press